Contents

Acknowledgements viii
List of Abbreviations ix
Preface xi

Introduction 1

Intellectual and political roots 2
‘Necessary bread’ – a new cadre of social workers 8
A poverty of theory – established approaches to ‘race’, gender, welfare and employment 9
Difference, discourse, subject position – a new social policy approach 16

Part I Governing Racial Formation 19

1 Configuring the Terrain: Governmentality, Racialized Population and Social Work 21

Introduction 21
Governmentality 21
‘The social’ 28
Racialized population in late twentieth-century Britain 33

2 Now you see it, Now you don’t: ‘Race’, Social Policy and the Blind Eye of Central Government 43

Introduction 43
The national policy framework 45
3 Sites of Condensation: Social Services and Racial Formation at the Local Level

Introduction 77
The London Borough of ‘Coolville’ 78
‘Inland City’ Council 101

4 ‘The Call of the Wild’: Contestatory Professional Discourses on ‘Race’ and Ethnicity

Introduction 118
What do we mean by ‘difference’? 119
Freezing the frame: discursive hegemony and ethnic absolutism 121
The ethnic sensitivity model 124
Opposites attract: a meeting of minds in the conceptual pool 126
The black staff model 129
A reconceptualization 131

Part II Complex Acts of Becoming: Working ‘Race’ and Gender

5 ‘Evidence of Things Not Seen’: The Complexities of the ‘Everyday’ for Black Women Social Workers

Introduction 135
Complex acts of becoming: four accounts 139

6 Categories of Exclusion: ‘Race’ and Gender in the SSD

Introduction 155
Feminism and sexual and racial difference 157
Speaking women 160
Constructing gender / constructing ‘race’ 164

7 Situated Voices: ‘Black Women’s Experience’ and Social Work

Introduction 170
‘Sisters chant: I struggle therefore I am’ 175
Boundaries of ‘race’ / boundaries of gender 190
‘Us’ and white women 191
‘Us’ and black men 194
Colouring the category: ‘racing’ the experience 196
Conclusion

Notes 207
References 211
Index 222