Contents

1 Introduction

Lambert van der Laan & Santos M. Ruesga
1.1 Western Europe: the rise and fall of the regulation model  3
1.2 Eastern Europe: changing policies and institutions  5
1.3 The present book  8

Part One: The general framework  13

2 The spatial-institutional perspective on the labour market in Europe

Lambert van der Laan & Santos M. Ruesga
2.1 Three trends in economic thinking  15
2.1.1 Humanisation and socialisation  15
2.1.2 Localisation  16
2.1.3 Theoretical integration  17
2.2 The spatial-institutional perspective  18
2.3 Regional labour markets  20

3 Setting the stage: general changes on the European labour market

Lambert van der Laan
3.1 Introduction  27
3.2 Quartairisation of jobs and functions  27
3.2.1 Economic, social and cultural capital  30
3.2.2 The information society  32
3.3 Developments in the supply of labour  34
3.3.1 Ageing
3.3.2 Migration
3.3.3 Participation
3.3.4 Feminisation
3.3.5 A macro-spatial summary of changes in labour supply

3.4 Macro-institutional structures, policies and labour market performance
3.4.1 Institutional structure and labour market performance
3.4.2 Policies and labour market performance
3.4.3 Conclusion

3.5 General conclusions

4 Regional and institutional changes in European labour markets

Santos M. Ruesga & Carlos Resa-Nestares

4.1 Introduction
4.2 Labour markets in Western Europe: convergence and divergence
4.3 Labour markets in Eastern Europe
4.4 Conclusion
Annex I
Annex II

Part Two: Western Europe

5 Regional labour markets and institutions in the United Kingdom

David Armstrong & David H. Blackaby

5.1 Introduction
5.2 Regional disparities in unemployment in the United Kingdom
5.3 The policy context
5.3.1 Labour market policy and the regional problem
5.3.2 Unions and pay bargaining
5.3.3 Labour mobility and vocational training
5.4 Labour market adjustments in the United Kingdom
5.4.1 Training
5.4.2 Labour mobility
5.4.3 Wage flexibility
5.5 Summary and conclusions

6 Institutions and regional labour markets in The Netherlands
   Jouke van Dijk & Andries de Grip

6.1 Introduction

6.2 The Dutch labour market
   6.2.1 The economic framework and socio-economic background
   6.2.2 The policy framework

6.3 The regional setting

6.4 Main policy issues
   6.4.1 Employment policy
   6.4.2 Regional policy
   6.4.3 Labour market policy

6.5 Effects of policy measures
   6.5.1 Employment policy
   6.5.2 Regional policy
   6.5.3 Labour market policy

6.6 Conclusions

7 Institutions and regional return to education in Sweden
   Eugenia Kazamaki-Ottersten

7.1 Introduction

7.2 General characteristics of the Swedish labour market

7.3 Regional labour markets

7.4 Human and social capital: three hypotheses

7.5 An empirical analysis of regional returns to education
   7.5.1 Data and model specification
   7.5.2 Results

7.6 Conclusions

8 Institutions and regional labour markets in Spain
   Carlos Álvarez, José M.F. Polanco & Santos M. Ruesga

8.1 Introduction

8.2 The Spanish labour market
   8.2.1 General characteristics of the institutional framework
   8.2.2 Labour policies
   8.2.3 The recent performance of the Spanish labour market

8.3 Regional labour markets in Spain
   8.3.1 The spatial framework
8.3.2 Regional disparities 168
8.3.3 Regional labour policies 169
8.4 Changing regional imbalances in the Spanish labour market 172
8.4.1 General changes in regional unemployment 172
8.4.2 Analysis of inter- and intra-regional disparities in unemployment levels 176
8.5 Regional labour supply and demand in Spain: an explanatory model 178
8.6 Summary and conclusions 181

9 Labour market institutions and the North-South divide in Italy

Luigi Bonatti & Carlo Borzaga 187
9.1 Introduction 187
9.2 Increasing North-South dualism 189
9.3 The polarisation of the labour market 193
9.4 The vicious circle perpetuating the disparities between the North and the South 199
9.5 Policy implications 205
9.6 Conclusion 208

Part Three: Eastern Europe 213

10 Institutions and regional labour markets in Bulgaria

Katia Vladimirova & Rossitsa Rangelova 215
10.1 Introduction 215
10.2 The economic and institutional framework of the labour market 217
10.3 Regional labour markets 219
10.3.1 Impact of demographics on regional labour markets 219
10.3.2 Development of the regional employment 220
10.3.3 Development of the (regional) unemployment 223
10.4 Labour market institutions 227
10.4.1 Labour offices, private job centres and other intermediates 227
10.4.2 Local authorities and tripartite cooperations 230
10.5 Employment policies 231
10.5.1 Unemployment insurance and benefits 232
10.5.2 Active policies 233
10.5.3 Effects of the institutional changes 234
10.6 Summary and future activities 235
11 Institutions and regional labour markets in the Czech Republic

Jaromir Gottvald & Milan Simek

11.1 The socio-economic background of the Czech labour market 239
11.2 The regional structure 243
  11.2.1 Historical background 243
  11.2.2 Administrative regions 245
  11.2.3 Main features of the regions 246
11.3 Actors on the regional labour markets 249
11.4 Employment policy 250
  11.4.1 Basic objectives 250
  11.4.2 Main policies 251
  11.4.3 Policy implementation 253
11.5 Future developments of labour market policies and the institutional framework 255

12 Regional labour market institutions in Slovakia

Magdaléna Hiadlovská

12.1 Introduction 257
12.2 The general socio-economic setting of the labour market 257
12.3 The regional differentiation of the socio-economic setting 260
12.4 Actors on the labour market 263
  12.4.1 Governmental organisations 263
  12.4.2 Employer’s organisations 264
  12.4.3 Trade unions 265
  12.4.4 Independent employment services 266
12.5 Governmental labour market policies 266
12.6 Regional actors and policies 269
  12.6.1 Regional state administration 269
  12.6.2 Local government 269
  12.6.3 Regional policies 270
12.7 The results of the labour market policies 271
12.8 Future developments 272

13 Institutions and regional labour markets in Rumania

Constanța Partenie, Dorin Jula, Daniela Constantin, Cornelia Pârlog & Calin Dinga

13.1 Introduction 275
13.2 Socio-economic conditions of the labour market 276
13.3 Institutional reform and labour market policies 279
13.4 The negotiation game
13.5 Regional disequilibria of the labour market
13.6 Regional unemployment
   13.6.1 New job-searchers on the labour market
   13.6.2 Regional migration of the unemployed
13.7 Regional policy and the labour market

About the authors