

---

Contents

List of figures	page	xiii
List of tables		xv
Acknowledgements		xviii
1 A sociology of international relations and an international relations of sociology		1
A neo-Weberian sociology of international change		1
Reconceptualising the state–economy relationship		3
A fiscal-sociological approach to IPE/IR		5
Fiscal sociology and ‘the wealth of states’		7
A non-realist theory of state power: the social and institutional bases of state capacity		7
IR and sociology as mutually constituting: ‘dual reflexivity’		13
The issue of trade regimes and economic growth		16
The advantages of a historical approach		19
The structure of the book		20
Part I Case studies in structural economic change: states and trade regime changes, 1870–1913		23
2 Protectionism in imperial Germany: moderate state capacity and indirect taxation		25
The limits of economism: a critique of Marxism and liberalism		25
Divergence of state and ‘Junker’ interests: 1879		31
State autonomy: co-opting the dominant Junker class		39

Convergence of state and 'Junker' interests: the 1880s	45
Qualified divergence of state and 'Junker' interests: the 1890s	51
Qualified convergence of state and 'Junker' interests: 1902/1906	58
The 'Junker' class and tariff protectionism, 1879–1913: a reappraisal	60
Moderate state capacity and the fiscal origins of tariff protectionism, 1870–1913	62
The military origins of tariff protectionism, 1880–1913	66
Conclusion: moderate state capacity and protectionism	69
3 Protectionism and industrialisation in tsarist Russia: weak state capacity and indirect taxation	71
The limits of economism: a critique of 'late development theory'	71
War and the drift to industrialisation and protectionism	75
The military origins of tariff protectionism and industrialisation: the expenditure push	79
Weak state capacity in the shift to indirect taxation	84
The fiscal-military origins of tariff protectionism, 1877–1913	91
The financial-military origins of tariff protectionism, 1877–1913	96
Dividing and ruling the bourgeoisie through protectionism	101
The state and geopolitics: protecting the defence industry	104
Autocratic versus capitalist rationalities: the state versus the capitalist class	107
Conclusion: partial industrialisation, state incapacity and tariff protectionism	112
4 Free trade versus protectionism in liberal Britain: strong state capacity and the conflict over taxation	115
The limits of economism	115
Taxation and trade politics, 1870–1900	122
Fiscal crisis and the rise of Tory protectionism, 1900–1906	127
'Protectionism or socialism': direct versus indirect taxation	131
The state in conflict with the dominant classes	138

Conclusion: strong state capacity, free trade, the income tax and the 'compromise of embedded liberalism'	145
5 Tariff protectionism and indirect taxation in federal states: the United States, Canada, Australia and Switzerland	148
Indirect tax and protectionism in the United States, 1789–1913	150
Indirect tax and protectionism in Canada, 1867–1913	158
Indirect tax and protectionism in Australia, 1901–1913	164
Indirect tax and protectionism in Switzerland, 1870–1913	168
Conclusion: towards a sociological theory of states and trade policy	172
Part II Theorising international and national structural economic and political change	173
6 A sociological theory of international economic change: the transition to tariff protectionism, 1870–1913	175
The limits of economism: a critique of Marxism, liberalism and late development theory	175
The limits of economism and neorealism: geofiscalism and trade regime changes, 1789–1913	190
The limits of hegemonic stability theory: Britain as a 'wary titan'	199
State capacity and the uneven development of state power accumulation in trade policies, 1870–1913	203
State power and trade regimes, 1870–c. 1990	210
Taxation and the role of political parties	212
The entwining of economic and fiscal variables	213
Integrating economic variables: 'class', 'late development' and state–society inputs	216
Conclusion: the state in the international political economy	218

7	State capacity in the international/national vortex: a non-realist theory of state power and international politics	221
	The limits of reductionist state theory: what's the matter with Marxism and liberalism?	221
	An introductory critique of Marxist, statist and realist theories of the state: grounding the state	227
	The multiple 'specific' domestic sources of state capacity	233
	The multiple 'general' domestic sources of state capacity	242
	The multiple international sources of state capacity	246
	Ten theses on state capacity	251
	Refining the Weberian definition of the modern state	252
	The 'wealth of states' and state capacity in the international politics of war and revolution	254
	A sociology of international relations and an international relations of sociology	265
	A non-realist theory of state power: a critique of hegemonic stability theory	269
	A critique of neorealism: 'wanted – the dynamic duo'	272
	Conclusion: out of the impasse	275
	Appendices	281
A	Additional German data	283
B	Calculating tax/government burdens: national income and government expenditure data	284
	Notes	291
	Bibliography	299
	Index	324

---

Figures

1.1 Taxation in the international/national vortex	page 6
2.1 German grain prices, 1870–1913	47
4.1 The radical social impact of the Liberal budget (1909/10)	140
5.1 The tariff as a proportion of US federal government income, 1789–1913	153
6.1 The ‘general’ linkage between trade dependence and trade regimes	179
6.2 The ‘specific’ linkage between export dependence and trade regimes	179
6.3 A multi-factor sociological theory of trade regime changes, 1870–1913	191
6.4 The international geofiscal cycle and trade regime changes, 1820–1913	194
6.5 Three ‘external’ theories of trade regime changes in the long nineteenth century	198
6.6 Britain’s military burden in comparative perspective, 1870–1913	202
6.7 The link between state ‘concentration’ and trade regimes	206
6.8 Proportions of the major categories of central tax revenues in Britain, Russia, Germany and the United States, 1870–1913	208
6.9 Modes of taxation and trade policies, 1870–1913	219
7.1 State capacity and the uneven accumulation of state power	235
7.2 The uneven relative political capacity and the ‘adaptability’ of states in the early twentieth century	255
7.3 Halliday’s ‘spatial trinity’: revolution and war in international politics	266

List of figures

7.4 A fiscal-sociological 'spatial trinity' (IPE): taxation and state capacity in trade regime changes	266
7.5 A fiscal-sociological 'spatial trinity' (IP): taxation and state capacity in war and social revolution	267

---

Tables

2.1	German wheat imports and exports in the late 1870s (in millions of kg)	page 29
2.2	The changing balance of fiscal power of the Reich and the Länder , 1872–1913	34
2.3	German Länder matricular contributions expressed in current and constant 1913 prices (in RMm)	35
2.4	The German Conservative Party's rejection of the Caprivi trade treaties	54
2.5	Reich (net) income, ordinary and extraordinary, 1872–1913 (in RMm)	63
2.6	Major revenue categories as a proportion of total net ordinary Reich income, 1872–1913	64
2.7	The fiscal balance of payments between the Reich and the Länder , 1875–1914 (in RMm)	65
2.8	Reich expenditures (ordinary and extraordinary) and expenditure burden, 1872–1913 (in RMm)	67
2.9	Major expenditure categories as a proportion of Reich expenditures, 1872–1913	68
2.10	Reich civil expenditures, 1901–1912	70
3.1	Russian gross central government expenditures, 1870–1913 (in Rb m)	80
3.2	Major categories of Russian expenditures as a proportion of the total, 1870–1913	81
3.3	Real Russian central government expenditures (cge/NNP expressed in %), 1860–1913	83
3.4	Russian central government revenue, ordinary and extraordinary, 1870–1913 (in Rb m)	85

List of tables

3.5	Major revenue categories as a proportion of Russian central government (net) ordinary income	86
3.6	The significant tariff revenue-yielding items in Russia, c. 1900	93
3.7	Russian customs duties, 1855–1912 (in %)	94
3.8	Russian tariff rates on heavy industry, 1868–1891 (duties in copecks per pud )	107
4.1	Annual growth rates (%) of key economic indicators (by cycles) in Britain, 1856–1913	117
4.2	Annual growth rates of British exports (by cycles and decades), 1860–1913	119
4.3	British central government expenditures expressed as a proportion of national income, 1860–1913	124
4.4	British central government revenues, ordinary and extraordinary, 1870–1913 (in £m)	125
4.5	Major revenue categories as a proportion of ordinary and extraordinary total net central government income in Britain, 1870–1913	126
4.6	Income tax rates in Britain, 1843–1913	127
4.7	Personal tax rates in Britain, 1903/4 and 1913/14	139
5.1	Major revenue categories as a proportion of US federal income, 1790–1913	152
5.2	Canadian imports, revenues and expenditures, 1868–1879 (in Can$m, current prices)	160
5.3	Canadian central government (dominion) revenues, 1870–1913 (in Can$m)	162
5.4	Major revenue categories as a proportion of net Canadian dominion income, 1870–1913	162
5.5	Main sources of Canadian customs revenues, 1868–1913	163
5.6	Australian commonwealth income, 1902–1913 (in £m)	166
5.7	Major revenue categories as a proportion of Australian federal income, 1902–1913	167
5.8	Swiss central government tariff income as a proportion of net income, 1885–1910	169
5.9	Central government expenditure burdens of various states ( cge /NNP), 1870–1913	170
5.10	Comparative military burdens ( d /NNP), 1870–1913	171
6.1	Tariff rates of various states, 1880–1913	177
6.2	The trade dependence of various national economies, 1875–1913	178

6.3	Per capita income levels and trade regimes	181
6.4	Per capita industrialisation levels and trade regimes	182
6.5	Share of revenue from trade taxes, c. 1980	211
7.1	Absolute and real military spending in Britain and Germany, 1901–1913	260
A1	The fiscal balance of payments between Prussia and the Reich, 1871–1913 (in RMm)	283
B1	Central government burdens (cge/NNP) of the Great Powers, 1820–1913	289
B2	Reworked national income (NNP at factor cost) of various countries, 1870–1913	290