Contents

List of illustrations
Series preface

1 Introduction: how we have come to think of ourselves as victims of systems
   - Systemic self-organization: the elimination of paradox
   - Participative self-organization: the reappearance of paradox
   - Complex responsive processes and the question of ethics
   - Outline of the book
   1
   4
   9
   17
   22

Part I
Leadership and systemic self-organization: participation in systems
27

2 Leadership: two questions seven years apart
   - Ron’s question: linking leadership, communication and teams
   - Alberto’s question: the emergence of leaders
   30
   31
   56

3 Complexity: are organizations really living systems?
   - Leadership and the New Science
   - The theory of complex adaptive systems
   - The Soul at Work
   - Surfing the Edge of Chaos
   - The problem with “living systems” as a theory of leadership and ethics
   60
   61
   68
   75
   80
   85
4 Social interaction: viewing our selves as autonomous individuals
   Culture: developing leadership theory on the basis of cybernetic theory 90
   Modernist ethics: individual thought apart from action 92
   Participation in "living" systems: harmony and inherent values 100
   Challenging the theory of inherent values: conflicts between cult values and functional values 107
   Summary 115
   119

Part II
Leadership and participative self-organization: participation in local interaction 123

5 The emergence of persons as selves in society 128
   Social interaction without the concept of the autonomous individual 131
   The paradox of time and the emergence of persons 143
   Local interaction and the emergence of the person 162
   Complex responsive processes of relating: the movement of experience in the living present 168

6 Leadership and ethics: emergence in everyday social interaction 175
   Ethics: the emergent structures forming human experience 175
   Contrasting time and causality in two theories of experience 183
   Cult leadership versus functional leadership: recognizing diversity through conflict 193
   Summary 203

7 Conclusion: articulating the ethics we are living 205
   The perspective of systemic self-organization 207

Bibliography 220
Index 225
Illustrations

Box

1.1 "Both... and" as opposed to "at the same time" 13

Figures

5.1 Social realities 135
5.2 The social act 151
5.3 The unity of the social and the self 154
5.4 The unity of mind 155
5.5 The unity of self-consciousness 157

Tables

1.1 Comparison of systemic self-organization and participative self-organization as ways of thinking 14
6.1 Two views of experience 193