Contents

Preface V

Summary 1

1 Current Trends in Public Sector Modernisation 1
1.1 A new best practice model of public sector task fulfillment 1
1.2 Public sector modernisation: a limited plurality of development patterns rather than a linear homogeneous development path 2
1.3 Finland: A Late-comer to public sector modernisation in a precarious compromise equilibrium of old and new steering systems. The search for a new momentum 3

2 The Impacts of Public Sector Modernisation 3
2.1 Fundamental criticisms of public sector reform: Modernisation as a passing trend and the threat to the democratic welfare state 3
2.2 The new organisational principle in current modernisation strategies: from the rationalistic planning model of state actors to the integration of state, economic and social regulatory mechanisms 4
2.3 Exemplary developments indicate the strategic relevance, but also the ambivalence of current public sector modernisation 4

3 The Development Dynamic of Public Sector Modernisation 5
3.1 The deficiencies of incrementalism and the fallacy of programmatic change 5
3.2 Political mobilisation and not economic crisis is the driving force behind public sector modernisation 5
3.3 The strategic role of political-administrative "Advocacy Coalitions" in the context of party political competition 6
3.4 Rooting the mobilisation for reform in the governance operators .. 6
3.5 Think tanks and meta-organisations to prepare the way for and support public sector modernisation 6

4 Ten Key Issues of Public Sector Modernisation 7
4.1 The necessity of and limits to internal administrative modernisation 7
4.2 From ideological privatisation to the rational use of markets 7
4.3 Citizen and customer participation in quality production: Beyond consumerist managerialism 8

4.4 Internal public sector modernisation involves both results steering and organisational re-engineering 8
4.5 The value added by the central departments 9
4.6 The new steering model between results steering and Total Quality Management 9
4.7 Evaluation as a complementary instrument to results steering 10
4.8 Overcoming the modernisation dichotomy: on the integration of management and work reform 10
4.9 Process steering and process qualification 11
4.10 Public sector modernisation: an innovative re-regulation of internal reform, social devolution and competitive context 11

New Frontiers in Public Sector Management – Trends and Issues in State and Local Government in Europe 13
Frieder Naschold

1 Evaluating and Monitoring the Transformation of the Public Sector 13

2 Public sector reform trends in the OECD: Profiles, processes and effects 19
2.1 Initiatives for public sector reform and modernisation in OECD countries 20
2.2 Modernisation profiles of the OECD countries 24
2.2.1 Finland: Precarious balance of tradition and modernisation 24
2.2.2 New Zealand: Radical reengineering on the private-sector model .. 33
2.2.3 Great Britain: Top-down modernisation and market orientation 34
2.2.4 Netherlands: Devolution, market elements, internal modernisation 34
2.2.5 Denmark: Devolution, market elements, internal modernisation ... 35
2.2.6 Sweden: Strategic internal modernisation through MbR and market mechanisms 36
2.2.7 Norway: Moderate and incremental internal modernisation 37
2.2.8 Japan: Persistence of bureaucratic governance by rule and reduction in public sector employment 38
2.2.9 Germany: Persistence of governance by rule and the use of skilled labour 40
2.2.10 USA: Bureaucratic managerialism, dynamic but not change-inducing 41
2.2.11 Austria: Bureaucratic governance by rule and symbolic politics ... 42
2.3 Regulatory regimes for public sector modernisation in the OECD . 43
2.4 The effectiveness of different regulatory regimes of public sector modernisation 46
2.4.1 The macroeconomic performance of the various regulatory regimes 47
2.4.2 The microeconomic performance of different regulatory mechanisms 52

2.5 Distributive effects induced by the transformation of rule-oriented governance regimes 58
2.6 Current trends and the challenges facing public sector modernisation in the 1990s 60
2.6.1 Governance by results between the Scylla of bureaucratic governance by rule and the Charybdis of competition 60
2.6.2 The rational use of markets 61
2.6.3 Towards the "guarantor" welfare state and strategic self-reliance .. 61
2.6.4 Questioning the "value-added" of strategic public sector management 62
2.6.5 Beyond the decoupling of managerialism and labour policy 62
2.6.6 The role of politics, public discourse and evaluation 63

3 Management by Results (MbR) Systems: Developments, Variants and Perspectives 64
3.1 Conflicting views on MbR 64
3.2 MbR: Dimensions and profiles 65
3.3 Between bureaucratic rule steering and results steering 67
3.4 Results steering between process stabilisation and process enhancement 69
3.5 Results steering, results organisation and organisational transformation 71
3.6 Results steering and strategic management 72
3.7 Results steering and decentral contextual steering: public administration as a political system 74
3.8 Excursus: Private Sector Steering Systems – The Finnish Firm BENEFON 77
3.8.1 A brief history of BENEFON 77
3.8.2 The firm: products, markets, production 78
3.8.3 The governance of BENEFON 79
3.8.4 Conditions of development and potential risks 82
3.9 Results steering and the public sector 83

4 The Modernisation of Central Government 86
4.1 Development trends at central government level: an international comparison of labour ministries and labour market authorities 87
4.1.1 Labour ministries undergoing change 87
4.1.2 A five-country comparison of labour ministries 88
4.1.3 Innovation, effectiveness and process dynamics 92
4.1.4 Scandinavian developments and the strategic position of Finland .. 94
4.1.5 The development dynamic of labour market authorities 97

4.2 Developments paths taken by central government institutions: an intra-national comparison of the transition from functional bureaucracy to results-driven organisations in Finland 100
4.2.1 From integrated official producer to enterprise with own production facilities in a competitive environment: The case of FinRA 101
4.2.2 New concepts and established practices: the case of the Ministry of Transport and Communication (MTC) 103
4.2.3 The long and winding road to MbR modernisation: The case of the Ministry of Labour (ML) 106
4.2.4 Integrating management reform and work reform: The case of the National Labour Protection Board 110
4.2.5 From bureaucratic-centralist administration to a customer-contractor relation: The reengineering of the Sibelius Academy 111
4.3 Key issues in central government modernisation 114
4.3.1 The crisis of the centre: The role of the central departments 114
4.3.2 Results areas and work organisation: Two central issues of MbR reform 120
4.3.3 The negotiating process in MbR systems 123
4.3.4 MbR development projects and evaluation 125
4.3.5 Competition or complementarity between public and private services 128
4.3.6 The effectiveness and efficiency of MbR systems 129

5 The Modernisation of Local Government 131
5.1 The local authority as the base unit of national public sector developments 131
5.2 An international comparison of developments at local government level 133
5.2.1 The institutional framework of local government administration ... 133
5.2.2 Developments at local government level: The focal points of modernisation 135
5.2.3 National profiles of local government modernisation 138
5.2.3.1 Reengineering of a traditional administration by central government: Rescinding the powers and changing the role of local government in Great Britain 138
5.2.3.2 From internal modernisation to the market model and back again? The cycles of local welfare production in Sweden 140
5.2.3.3 Internal modernisation and decentralisation. Changes in local government welfare production in Finland 141
5.2.3.4 The incrementalism of the traditionalist: German local government on the road to modernity 143

5.2.4 The governance structure of local government – an intermediate résumé 144
5.3 An international comparison of local government performance: A competition between eleven city administrations 147
5.4 Modernisation of the city administration of Hämeenlinna – Innovative development and development constraints from an international perspective 152
5.4.1 The three modernisation waves in Hämeenlinna 152
5.4.1.1 The internal process of development: The renewal of the management system in Hämeenlinna 154
5.4.1.2 The next step: the Hämeenlinna model 160
5.4.2 An external evaluation from Finland 162
5.5 Innovative development and development constraints within local government from a comparative perspective 163
5.5.1 Local government modernisation between economic pressure and political decision-making 164
5.5.2 The development dynamics of local government modernisation ... 166
5.5.3 Quality of service and customer orientation: Modernisation between managerialism and consumerism 169
5.5.4 Market-oriented organisational alternatives: The purchaser-contractor model 177
5.5.5 The dichotomy within local government modernisation 183
5.5.6 The potential for, and conflicts over resource redistribution in local government modernisation 185
5.5.7 Modernisation policy and process steering 187

6 The Ambivalent Future of Public Sector Modernisation 189
6.1 Between hubris and helplessness 190
6.2 The relationship between public and private sector in the modernisation process 191
6.3 Rationalisation of decision systems: beyond the rationalistic planning and decision making models 193
6.4 The relationship between administrative reform and modernisation effects 196
6.5 Beyond the dichotomy between "grand strategy" and "incrementalism": factors critical for the success of implementation strategies in public sector reform 198
6.5.1 Resource independence 199
6.5.2 Path dependency 201
6.5.3 Advocacy coalitions in the context of party-political competition .. 201
6.5.4 Institutional anchoring 201
6.5.5 Meta-organisations 202
6.5.6 The production of knowledge and orientation 202

References 203

Appendix 1 to 4 210

Case Studies 219

Restructuring Labour Administration – investigating the Finnish experience 221
Robert Arnkil

1 Introduction 221

2 The context: environment and organization 222
2.1 The labour market situation 222
2.2 The Ministry of Labour 224

3 The "first wave" of management by results 225
3.1 Pushing forward or getting stuck? 225
3.2 Changes preceding management by results in the labour administration 226
3.3 The "first wave" of the implementation of MbR in the labour administration 227
3.3.1 Management cycle, negotiations and measurements in MbR 227
3.3.2 Organization renewal and MbR 231
3.4 Feedback from staff on MbR 234
3.5 Conclusions 237

4 Experiences in developmental projects 237
4.1 How to reach innovative acceleration? 237
4.2 Examples of developmental projects 237
4.3 Evaluation 241

5 Practical experiences: building blocks of further restructuring 241
5.1 What are the keys to reach new impetus? 241
5.2 Integrating results measurement 243
5.3 Building a quality feedback system 245
5.3.1 Introducing a quality questionnaire to employment offices 245
5.3.2 The main results of the quality-feedback 248
5.3.3 Further development of the feedback system 249
5.4 Developing "action statistics" and "action-follow-up" methods in customer service 249
5.5 Developing process analysis and team-work in customer-service .. 252
5.6 Organizational development in districts and employment offices... 253
5.6.1 Developing the structure of large and mid-size employment offices 254
5.6.2 Developing the internal network in labour districts 254
5.6.3 Activating the customer 255
5.7 Developing local-regional analysis of the labour markets 255

5.8 Enhancing information processing 256
5.9 Building an integrative "constellation of success" 257

6 Summary: The key issues of further restructuring 263

Appendix 1 – 2 266

References 269

Surpassing Functional Bureaucracy with Management by Results – Experiences in Finnish State Administration 271
Jaakko Virkkunen

1 Management as a culturally formed activity system 271
1.1 The concept of activity system 271
1.2 Cultural mediators of management 274
1.3 Historical types of management activity 275
1.4 The expansive transition to a new management activity system 276

2 Management by results as a solution to the problems of the functional bureaucracy 279
2.1 The functional bureaucracy 279
2.2 Attempts to surpass functional bureaucracy 281

3 Transition to management by results in the Finnish Road Administration (FinnRA) 285
3.1 The need to develop the management practice 285
3.2 The crisis of the old management activity and the double bind 286
3.3 Reframing the object of management's work: springboards and the given new 286
3.4 The contradiction between the new and the old 289
3.5 Contradictions with surrounding activities and the consolidation and expansion of the new system 289
3.6 Evaluation 290

4 Management by results in the Ministry of Transport and Communications 293
4.1 The Ministry of Transport and Communications 293
4.2 The need state: a latent crisis of the old management system 294
4.3 Planning the new mediators for management, springboards 295
4.4 Changing the management practice – contradictions of the new and the old 298
4.5 Generalizing the new principle 300
4.6 Evaluation 302

5 Management by results in the Ministry of Labour 303
5.1 The Ministry of Labour 303

5.2 The need state and the crisis of the old practice 303
5.3 Planning the new practice and new mediators of management 304
5.4 Changing the management practice 304
5.5 Evaluation 307

6 Increasing flexibility in the Uusimaa district of labour protection .. 309
6.1 The Uusimaa district of labour protection 309
6.2 The need to develop the management practice 310
6.3 Crisis of the old management practice 311
6.4 Planning the new management activity system 311
6.5 Changing the management practice 312

7 Creating flexibility and cost consciousness with management by results in the Sibelius Academy 313
7.1 The Sibelius Academy 313
7.2 The need for management development 314
7.3 Deadlock of the old management system 314
7.4 Planning the new management practice 315
7.5 The change of management practice – contradictions of the old and the new activity system 315
7.6 Expansion of the new management principle – contradictions with the surrounding activities 317

8 Issues of criticism and further development of the management by results system 319
8.1 Management by objectives and management by results 319
8.2 The importance of multiple perspectives and the negotiation process 321
8.3 The change process: the problem of creating motivation to change 324

References 325