

Contents

Figures and tables	vii
Contributors	xii
Preface	xiv
1 Place-specific determinants of FDI: the geographical perspective Stephen Meyer and Tao Qu	1
2 An examination of foreign direct investment theories and the multinational firm: a business/economics perspective Prescott C. Ensign	15
3 Foreign direct investment in the innovation-driven stage: toward a learning option perspective Mike W. Peng	29
4 The internationalization process approach to the location of foreign direct investments: an empirical analysis Gabriel R. G. Benito and Geir Gripsrud	43
5 Silicon Glen - fifty years of the electronics industry Ewan Sutherland	59
6 Japanese manufacturing companies in southern Ontario and NAFTA David W. Edgington	85
7 Japanese corporate groups and the locational strategy of Japanese auto and component parts makers in the United States Neil Reid, Andrew Solochoa and Breandán Ó hUallacháin	107

8	Causes of foreign takeovers in the United States: a real sector imperfections model	121
	M. Wayne Marr, Sanjeev Mohta and Michael J. Spivey
9	Trade regimes, foreign investment, and the new liberalization environment in Indonesia	151
	Thomas R. Leinbach
10	The location of foreign banks in Australia	175
	April Wright and Peter Liesch
11	Transnational branch banking 1976-1986: an empiricist's approach	191
	David M. Dahm and Milford B. Green
12	Concentration and dispersion of global control links and changes in the multinational quaternary place system	223
	Kee-Bom Nahm and R. Keith Semple
	References	247

Figures and tables

Figure	3.1	The existing eclectic theory of foreign direct investment:the endowment/market failure paradigm	39
Figure	3.2	The revised eclectic theory of foreign direct investment: incorporating a learning option perspective	39
Table	3.1	Foreign direct investment: Inflows and outflows of selected industrialized countries 1974-1990	31
Table	3.2	Frequency of announced FDI entries from major investing countries into US manufacturing industries, 1975-1990	34
Table	4.1	Means, standard deviations, and Pearson correlation coefficients (n=203)	53
Table	4.2	Multiple regression of equations (1)-(3), OLS-estimation (n=203)	53
Table	4.3	Multiple regression of equations (1)-(3) for subsample consisting of FDIs with investment number five or less. OLS-estimation (n=147)	54
Figure	5.1	Employment in overseas-owned manufacturing plants	67
Figure	5.2	Employment by industry grouping in the electronic sector	69
Figure	5.3	Employment in the electronics sectors by country of ownership	71
Figure	5.4	Source of materials input by value	72

Figure	5.5	DEC financial results (1977-1994)	77
Table	5.1	Per capita expenditure by UK region in 1983 and 1990	64
Table	5.2	Branch plants opened in Scotland	68
Table	5.3	Leading companies in Silicon Glen	70
Table	5.4	Summary of Scottish electronics and IT industries	83
Figure	6.1	Four potential foreign direct investment configurations in NAFTA: (a) hub and spoke; (b) parallel paths; (c) national complementarity; and (d) national specialization	87
Figure	6.2	Number of Japanese factories by Provinces, States and Mexico, 1992	88
Figure	6.3	Japanese production networks in NAFTA I: (a) Honda Motor Corporations; (b) Honda's suppliers, Bellemar Parts Industries, F and P Mfg, and Yachio of Ontario Manufacturing Inc.	95
Figure	6.4	Japanese Production Networks in NAFTA II: (a) Matheson Gas and Thermos Products; (b) Mitsubishi Electronics	96
Table	6.1	Profile of Japanese manufacturing companies in Ontario, 1994	90
Table	6.2	Exports, local content and research and development	101
Table	6.3	Annual Japanese manufacturing FDI in NAFTA: Canada, USA and Mexico, percentage share (Financial years, April-March)	102
Table	6.4	Decision making in Japanese subsidiaries, Southern Ontario, 1994	103
Table	7.1	Geographic distribution of Japanese auto-related direct investment in the United States	108
Table	8.1	Summary statistics of foreign takeover targets and control samples	139

Table	8.2	Logit model estimation of foreign takeover targets versus control samples	142
Figure	9.1	Indonesian trade: oil and gas included exports and imports, 1980-1993	156
Figure	9.2	Indonesian trade: nonoil and gas exports and imports, 1980-1993	158
Figure	9.3	ASEAN average annual growth in trade, 1980-1992 (excluding Brunei)	160
Figure	9.4	Indonesian exports by SITC class, 1983-1993	161
Figure	9.5	Indonesian exports to major partners, 1983-1993	162
Figure	9.6	Average annual export growth with major partners, 1986-1993	165
Figure	9.7	Indonesian exports to ASEAN nations, 1980-1993	166
Figure	9.8	Indonesian approved foreign investment, 1985-1994	167
Figure	9.9	Average percentage share of approved foreign investment by location, 1985-1993	168
Figure	9.10	Approved foreign investment: United States and Japan, 1985-1993	170
Figure	9.11	Approved foreign investment by major investor, 1985-1993	172
Table	10.1	Foreign banks in Australia	179
Table	10.2	Location advantages of Australia	185
Figure	11.1	Number of banks and assets, principal banking nations, 1986 sample	192
Figure	11.2	Regional banking flow index, 1976	193
Figure	11.3	Regional banking flow index, 1986	194
Figure	11.4	Matrix symmetrization	208

Figure	11.5	MDS input data transformations	209
Figure	11.6	Banks as actors, 1976	211
Figure	11.7	Banks as actors, 1986	212
Figure	11.8	Cities as actors, 1976	215
Figure	11.9	Cities as actors, 1986	217
Figure	11.10	Relative positions of banking nodes, based on risk and market knowledge as perceived by firms	219
Table	11.1	Transnational linkages: operational and geographic characteristics	204
Table	11.2	ALSCAL multidimensional solutions	206
Figure	12.1	Rank-size distribution for the largest headquarters centres of the 800 nonfinancial MNCs by region	237
Figure	12.2	Rank size distribution for the largest subsidiary centres of the 800 nonfinancial MNCs by region	238
Figure	12.3	Hierarchy of the top 50 multinational centres in terms of revenues in the controlling subsidiary centres by level of centrality 1974	241
Figure	12.4	Hierarchy of the top 50 multinational centres in terms of revenue in the controlling subsidiary centres by level of centrality, 1991	242
Table	12.1	Regional share of the 800 nonfinancial MNCs' revenues	230
Table	12.2	The 800 nonfinancial multinational headquarters-subsidiary linkages by region, 1974-91	231
Table	12.3	Corporate and spatial concentration ratios for the 800 nonfinancial MNCs	233
Table	12.4	Corporate and spatial concentration ratios for the subsidiaries of the 800 nonfinancial MNCs	234
Table	12.5	Share of top 10 per cent multinational headquarters and subsidiary centres by region, 1974-1991	236

