

Contents

List of figures	viii
List of tables	x
List of boxes	xiii
Acknowledgements	xv
List of abbreviations	xvii
Introduction	1
Women's employment in Europe: trends and prospects
PART I
Women's employment in a changing Europe
Introduction	13
1 Political and economic change	17
A changing world and a changing European economy: the implications for women and men in the European Union
Convergence and divergence within European member states
The impact of the changing economic and political conditions on men and women: gender and country differences
Summary: swimming against the tide
2 Organisational and employment change	62
Current trends and developments in organisations and employment practices
Summary: towards a more or a less segmented labour market

3	Changes in women's labour supply and household composition	80
	Trends in women's labour market activity
	Trends in women's qualification levels and their impact on labour market behaviour
	Trends in family formation, household structure and women's activity rates
	Motherhood, education and women's employment rates
	Conclusions
 PART II
Indicators of women's employment in the 1990s
	Introduction	115
4	Wage work, care work and welfare	118
	Gender and the employment rate
	Unemployment and labour market organisation
	The welfare state and family system
	Summary
5	Occupational segregation	168
	Measuring sex segregation
	Indices of occupational segregation and concentration
	Differences between member states in the pattern of segregation and occupational structure
	Other dimensions to segregation: atypical employment, sector and workplace
	Trends in occupational segregation
	Trends in vertical segregation
	Summary and policy conclusions
6	Wage determination and sex segregation in employment	223
	Trends in the gender pay gap
	The effect of atypical workers on the gender pay gap
	Systems of wage protection
	The risk of low pay
	Pay dispersion trends
	Summary: the need to mainstream gender pay equity

7	Gender and working-time	251
	The expansion of part-time jobs
	Working hours and contractual status
	Unsocial hours working
	Working hours and the life cycle
	Temporary work and the life cycle
	Summary
	PART III
	Reflections on trends and future prospects
	Introduction	285
8	Gender and future labour market trends	287
	Gender and future labour supply trends
	Gender and the restructuring of the European labour market
9	Prospects for equality	303
	Gender equality: a case of uneven progress
	Towards an equal opportunities employment policy in Europe?
	Appendix	317
	Notes	321
	Bibliography	324
	Index	340

Figures

1.1	Annual change in growth, productivity and employment and the unemployment rates in European Union (E15), USA and Japan, 1987–1997	25
1.2	Convergence criteria for European monetary union and the performance of member states	27
1.3	Annual change in growth, productivity and employment and the unemployment rate, 1987–1997	30
3.1	The evolution of female age-related activity curves, 1983–1994	84
3.2	Impact of educational attainment on the activity rates of non-mothers and mothers aged 20–39, 1994	93
3.3	Activity rates of mothers and non-mothers aged 20–39, 1989 and 1994	99
3.4	Full- and part-time employment rates of non-mothers and mothers aged 20–39 by number of children, 1994	102
3.5	Economic activity of mothers with a child aged 10 or under, 1993	104
3.6	Full- and part-time employment rates of non-mothers and mothers aged 20–39 by age of youngest child, 1994	107
3.7	Full- and part-time employment rates of mothers aged 20–39 by educational attainment, 1994	109
4.1	Youth employment rates and the change between 1989 and 1994	125
4.2	Youth non-employment rates and the change between 1989 and 1994	126
4.3	Share of young women and men aged 15–24 in full-time education, 1989 and 1994	127
4.4	Core-age employment rates and the change between 1989 and 1994	129
4.5	Core-age non-employment rates and the change between 1989 and 1994	131
4.6	Older-age employment rates and the change between 1989 and 1994	134

4.7	Older age non-employment rates and the change between 1989 and 1994	135
4.8	Unemployment and hidden unemployment by gender in the EU, 1995	138
4.9	Maximum duration of non-means-tested unemployment benefits	148
4.10	Unemployment rates of women and men with an unemployed spouse, 1996	152
4.11	Average replacement rates for a full contributory state pension and a social assistance pension	156
5.1	The concentration of women's and men's employment into segregated occupations	178
5.2	Concentration of employment in broad occupation groups by gender and working-time, EU12	181
5.3	The female and male full- and part-time share of major occupational groups, 1994	184
5.4	Distribution of employment by professional status	200
6.1	Gender pay ratios for manual and non-manual workers in industry, 1989–1993	225
6.2	Gender pay ratios for non-manual workers in the retail and insurance sectors, 1989–1993	226
6.3	Systems of wage protection in the European Union	233
7.1	Over- and underworking of male and female employees, 1994	264
7.2	Share of female and male employees working Saturdays and Sundays by gender, 1994	268
7.3	Share of full- and part-time employees working Saturdays by gender, 1994	269
7.4	Share of full- and part-time employees working Sundays by gender, 1994	269
7.5	Employment rates by age and full- and part-time status for men and women in the EU, 1994	272–3
7.6	Concentration of temporary employees among those aged under 30, 1994	279
8.1	Distribution of the non-employed by gender and status, 1995	290
8.2	Distribution of the non-employed population by educational attainment and gender, E15	291

Tables

1.1	General government deficit and general government gross debt	26
1.2	Annual variation in wages and inflation in the European Union, 1992–1997	35
1.3	Gender composition of participants in initial vocational education and training by gender, 1993–1994	51
1.4	Employment rates by gender in the European Union, 1989–1996	55
1.5	Unemployment rates by gender in the European Union, 1989–1996	56
1.6	Youth unemployment rates by gender in the European Union, 1989–1996	58
3.1	Index of gender differences in education by age group, 1992	88
3.2	Concentration by subject for women who graduated in 1992	90
3.3	Marital trends in the European Union, 1960–1993	95
3.4	Trends in childbearing in the European Union, 1960–1993	96
3.5	Generational decline in fertility rates for selected cohorts	97
3.6	One-parent families as a share of all families with children, 1994	98
4.1	Employment rates in the European Union	121
4.2	The percentage point contribution by gender to changing employment rates within EU member states, 1989–1994	123
4.3	Employment rates by educational attainment for the 25–49 age group, 1994	130
4.4	Unemployment rates as a share of the labour force by educational level, 1994	133
4.5	Characteristics of unemployment in the European Union, 1994	140
4.6	Characteristics of youth (15–24 years) unemployment by member state, 1994	142
4.7	Unemployment benefit systems in the EU member states	147

4.8	Replacement rate for the initial period of unemployment benefits	150
4.9	Pension systems in EU member states	156
4.10	Taxation systems in EU member states	159
4.11	Parental leave and childcare in EU member states	161
5.1	Indices of segregation for all in employment, 1994	173
5.2	Indices of segregation for all in employment	173
5.3	Countries ranked in descending order from highest to lowest levels of segregation	175
5.4	The distribution of women's and men's employment between female-dominated, mixed-sex and male-dominated occupations, 1994	179
5.5	Concentration of employment by broad occupational groups and by gender	182
5.6	Occupational sex segregation by occupational group	185
5.7	The most female-dominated and male-dominated occupational sub-groups (ISCO-88 (COM) 2-digit data)	187
5.8	Occupations which occur among the most female- and male-dominated occupations in the new member states	189
5.9	Segregation in specific occupations, 1994	194
5.10	Indices of segregation for employees, non-employees and all in employment, 1994	195
5.11	Concentration and segregation of employment by professional status and gender, 1994: E12	198
5.12	Indices of segregation for full-time, part-time and all in employment, 1994	202
5.13	The concentration of women full-timers and women part-timers in female-dominated occupations, 1994	203
5.14	Concentration of full-time and part-time employment by gender for broad occupational groups, 1994	205
5.15	Trends in segregation indices in the 1980s and 1990s using national data sources for selected countries	209
6.1	Changes in the real and relative level of minimum wages, 1989–1994	235
6.2	Share of low-paid full-time workers by gender	246
6.3	Minimum wage earners by gender	246
7.1	Contribution of full- and part-time jobs to net job change, 1989–1994	254
7.2	The share of employed women and men working part-time in the European Union, 1989 and 1994	255
7.3	Average hours by employment category and gender, 1994	258
7.4	Gender gap in average hours of full-time employees by sector and country, 1994	262
7.5	Reasons for working part-time	275

xii Tables

7.6	The share of female and male employees in temporary jobs, 1989 and 1994	278
7.7	Percentage change in temporary and permanent employees by gender and working-time, 1989 to 1994	280
8.1	Projected changes in female labour force in the European Union, 1990–2020	288
8.2	Impact of population and cohort effects on female working age employment rate, 1995 to 2010	293
8.3	The educational distribution of the population aged 25–64 as a result of cohort effects 1995–2010	295
8.4	The distribution of usual hours of mothers with at least one child under 15, by educational attainment, 1995	296–7
8.5	Projected changes in female employment 1990–2005: high scenario	299

Appendix Tables

1.1	Female activity rates by detailed age group and the projected change between 1990 and 2005 under the high and low scenarios	318–19
1.2	Projected change in female activity rates by broad age groups, 1990 base year	320

Boxes

Data box: Information on the data used in the book	8–10
1.1 EC directives, memoranda, recommendations, resolutions and programmes to promote equality of opportunity	19–20
1.2 Population change and migration flows	32
1.3 Economic development and EU transfers and structural funds	33
1.4 Wage moderation has been achieved by a range of different policies, with different implications for women	36–7
1.5 Pension reforms and gender equality	38–9
1.6 Policies to increase means-testing reduce women's access to benefits	40–1
1.7 Family policy changes extend leaves but lower benefits or increase means-testing	42–3
1.8 Cutbacks in public sector employment threaten women's jobs	44–5
1.9 Flexibility policies take different forms and fulfil different objectives	48–9
1.10 Towards lower non-wage labour costs: a female-friendly policy?	50
1.11 The increasing casualisation of the youth labour market	60
2.1 Changes to regulations relating to dismissal	63
2.2 Reintegrating the redundant: a male-dominated policy?	65
2.3 Flexibility policies at the company or sectoral level	66–7
2.4 Towards flatter hierarchies, functional flexibility and greater gender inequality?	71
2.5 Access to training: some mixed feelings	73
2.6 The persistence of gender discrimination	74
2.7 Positive action policies	76–7
2.8 Pay equality policies	78
3.1 The 1990 turning point in Sweden and Finland: female activity rates start to fall	82
3.2 Generational increase in women's labour market continuity	83

3.3	Women's increasing participation in non-traditional education and training	89
3.4	High and persistent segregation of vocational training courses	91
3.5	Maternal activity rates in Finland and Sweden	100
4.1	Strong, modified and weak male breadwinner states	119
4.2	Problems with the definitions of economic activity status	137
4.3	Towards gender-friendly active labour market policies	154
5.1	Sex segregation in six occupational case study areas: an update on previous research	192–3
5.2	Segregation remained a persistent feature of the labour markets in Austria, Finland and Sweden during the 1980s	210
5.3	Where were the new jobs for women in the 1990s: towards a segregated or desegregated labour market?	212
5.4	Women are still bumping up against the glass ceiling, particularly in the private sector	215
5.5	Women may be facing more competition from men as male unemployment rises	216
5.6	Vertical segregation is found in both public and private sectors but is greater in private organisations	217
5.7	Desegregation may be the beginning of a process of resegregation	219
5.8	Women tend to require higher qualifications or longer work experience to reach the same grade	220
5.9	Equal opportunity policies can help reduce vertical segregation but they need to be carefully targeted	221
6.1	Statistics on earnings: some problems for the measurement of gender pay equity	224
6.2	Decentralisation: a move towards a two- or three-tier system of protection?	240
6.3	From seniority to individualised merit pay	243
7.1	Women dominate marginal jobs	257
7.2	Differences and similarities in working-time preferences by gender	266–7
7.3	Not all female part-timers have care responsibilities	274
7.4	Women are still burdened by most of the unpaid domestic work in the household	276
7.5	Many of the new jobs were flexible during and after the recession of the early 1990s, particularly for the young	281
9.1	The case for and against mainstreaming	310–11