

Contents

Preface	vii
1 Revolutions in the Sociological Imagination	1
What is a Revolution?	4
What is it that Changes During a Revolution?	7
What Causes Revolution?	9
Why Do People Participate in Revolutions?	11
What are the Consequences of Revolution?	12
A Method of Inquiry	13
2 On the Shoulders of Giants: Classical Sociological Perspectives on Revolution	15
Karl Marx and Revolutionary Imperatives	16
Alexis de Tocqueville and Revolutionary Ambivalence	25
Other Classical Perspectives	33
3 Stages, Systems, and Deprivation: Non-Structural Theories of Revolution	46
The "Natural History" of Revolution	47
The Disequibrated Social System	53
The Psychology of Revolutionary Behavior	67
The Revolutionary Personality	70
Aggregate Social Psychological Models	73
4 Revolution in an International Context: Geopolitical Competition and the Capitalist World Economy	83
The Need for Structural Analysis	83
The Marxist Background	87

vi	Contents
	Political Competition Among States	92
	Polanyi and the World Market	94
	Wallerstein's World System Theory	98
	Capitalism as History	101
	Wallerstein's Conceptual Model of Revolution	106
	Problems with the World System Model	110
5	Class Struggle and Revolution	116
	Lenin's Class Theory	118
	Barrington Moore and the Politics of Agricultural Production	120
	Moore's Typology of Revolution	123
	State Autonomy and Cultural Variables in Moore's Class Analysis	129
	The Fusion of Class Analysis and the World System	136
	The Limits of Paige's "Agronomic Determinism"	141
6	The State and Revolution	145
	The Classical Legacy	147
	State-builders as Revolutionaries	153
	Revolution as Geopolitical Failure	156
	Revolution and Modernity	161
	Anderson and Absolutism	163
	Revolutionaries as State-builders: Skocpol's Structural Model	171
	The Limits of Skocpol's Structural Perspective	185
7	Motivation and Mobilization: A Structural Social Psychology of Revolution	188
	From Motivation to Mobilization: A Contextual Social Psychology of Revolution	188
	Rational Actors and Moral Economy	193
	The Value of the Moral Economy Model	203
	The Tilly Synthesis	206
8	Conclusion	217
	Space and Time: Structure and History	218
	The Centrality of the State	220
	A Comparative Historical Method	221
	The Analytic Posture	223
	Notes	225
	References	230
	Index	240