
Contents

List of tables	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
PART 1 THE ROLE OF THE GOVERNMENT
1 The role of fiscal policy in developing countries	9
2 Fiscal policy, Keynesian economics and the mobilization of savings in developing countries	20
3 The role of the public sector in the market economies of developing Asia: general lessons for the current debt strategy	36
PART 2 STABILIZATION AND GROWTH
4 Fiscal disequilibrium in developing countries: from cyclical instrument to structural problem	73
5 Fiscal policy responses to exogenous shocks in developing countries	85
6 Is there a limit to the size of fiscal deficits in developing countries?	91
7 Inflation, lags in collection, and the real value of tax revenue	104
8 The impact of macroeconomic policies on the level of taxation (and on the fiscal balance) in developing countries	116
9 Fiscal policy, growth and design of stabilization programmes	138
PART 3 TAXATION
10 Tax system and policy objectives in developing countries: general principles and diagnostic tests	157
11 Comments on 'Tax policy and economic growth in developing nations', by Alvin Rabushka and Bruce Bartlett	175
12 A review of major tax policy missions in developing countries	182
13 Potential income as a tax base in theory and in practice	193
14 Import taxes and economic development	210
15 Export taxes in developing countries	227
Index	241