

CONTENTS

List of illustrations	ix
Preface	xiii
1 The nature of interpersonal skills: a historical perspective	1
2 Developing interpersonal skills: a micro-skills approach	19
3 Awareness of self and others and the development of interpersonal competence	32
4 Listening	48
5 Listening to non-verbal messages	71
6 Questioning and the information-getting interview	98
7 Presenting information to others	130
8 Helping and facilitating	157
9 Asserting and influencing	200
10 Negotiating	224
11 Working with groups	259
12 Managing relationships more effectively	291
Index	301

ILLUSTRATIONS

Figures

1.1	Argyle's motor skill model	7
1.2	An extended model of interpersonal interaction	8
1.3	Cognition and behaviour	10
2.1	The experiential learning model	23
2.2	How learning occurs	25
5.1-5.6	The six emotions	76
5.7	Surprise	78
5.8	Fear	78
5.9	Anger	79
5.10	Disgust	79
5.11	Happiness	80
5.12	Sadness	80
5.13	Posture: interpretations of stick-figure diagrams	87
5.14	Characteristics of vocal expression	91
6.1	The interaction between change agents and organisational members	102
7.1	Seating arrangements	136
7.2	The attention curve	138
8.1	A force field	180
8.2	The helping relationship	186
9.1	The non-assertive-aggressive continuum	201
9.2	Ways of responding to a situation	202
9.3	Three-part assertion messages	207
10.1	Settlement not possible	227
10.2	Overlapping limits offer possibility for settlement	227
10.3	The dual concern model of motivational orientation	231
10.4	The integrative and distributive dimensions	232
10.5	The relationship between opening bid and outcome	246
11.1	Frequency and duration of communication	267
11.2	Communication patterns	269

ILLUSTRATIONS

11.3	Wheel	270
11.4	All channel	270
11.5	Role functions' record sheet	273
11.6	Dimensions of interpersonal style	280
11.7	Group decision-making check-list	285
12.1	Ego states	295
12.2	Manager to secretary : 'Where is the telephone directory?'	296
12.3	Secretary to manager (parallel transaction): 'You lent it to Bob'	296
12.4	Secretary to manager (crossed transaction): 'How come you can never find things when you want them?'	297

Tables

10.1	Uses of the five conflict modes, as reported by a group of chief executives	234
10.2	Contending and non-contending negotiating behaviours	240

Exercises

1.1	Cognition and behaviour	9
2.1	What's in a style?	29
3.1	Reflecting on patterns of past behaviour	39
3.2	Perception matrix	42
3.3	Effect of our concept of self on our behaviour towards others	44
4.1	Preparing to listen	51
4.2	Not attending to others	57
4.3	Attending to others	60
4.4	Following skills	65
4.5	Reflecting skills	68
5.1	Facial expressions	75
5.2	Interpreting the meaning of different postures	86
5.3	Listening to non-verbal signs	93
6.1	Cognitive scene setting	109
6.2	Information requirements and interview plans	111
6.3	Planning the schedule of questions	120
6.4	Questioning and probing	122
6.5	Managing closure	126
6.6	Assessing the effectiveness of your interviewing style	127
7.1	Developing presentation skills	149
8.1	Helping style profile	159
8.2	Bench-marking effective helping behaviour	174
8.3	Empathic listening	183
8.4	Giving feedback	189

ILLUSTRATIONS

8.5	Constructive confronting	192
8.6	Monitoring core values	195
8.7	Exercise consultation	196
9.1	Diagnosing your interpersonal style	203
9.2	Diagnosing the need for assertive behaviour	212
9.3	Check-list for the acquisition and exercise of power	218
9.4	Effective asserting	220
10.1	Negotiating style questionnaire	226
10.2	Planning for a negotiation	229
10.3	Negotiating strategy	237
10.4	Negotiating behaviours	241
10.5	Negotiating tactics	254
11.1	Observing and categorising role functions	278
11.2	Fishbowl: Group on group	286
11.3	Fishbowl: Individual on individual	288