Contents

Preface xi

Introduction: Three Eras of Rural Sociological Research on Agriculture xv

1. Rural Sociological Research on the Structure of Agriculture, 1900 to the Early 1950s 1

   Introduction 1
   Research Prior to the 1930s 2
   Studies with the Type of Agricultural System as the Organizing Theme 22
   Specialized Studies: Tenure, Part-Time Farming, Low-Income Farmers, and Other Structural Components of Agriculture 33
   Conclusion 42

2. Rural Sociological Research on the Structure of Agriculture, the Early 1950s to the Early 1970s: Behaviorism and the Social Psychology of Agricultural Activities 43

   Introduction 43
   The Diffusion and Adoption of Agricultural Innovations 46

The Value Orientations of Farmers 63
Educational and Occupational Aspirations and Achievements Among Farm-Reared People 67
Conclusion 72

3. The New Sociology of Agriculture, I: The Political Economy and Social Structure of Farms, Farm Households, and Farm Labor 73

Introduction 73
Political Economy and the New Sociology of Agriculture 78
Subculture and Agricultural Structure 94
Industrial Agriculture 95
The Agricultural Wage Labor Force 101
Small Farms and Part-Time Farming 106
Gender and Agriculture 115
Conclusion 125

4. The New Sociology of Agriculture, II: The Environment of Agriculture 127

The Impact of Technological Change on Agriculture 128
The Sociology of Agricultural Science 135
Agriculture and the Rural Community 145
The Farm Crisis of the 1980s 151
Impacts of Agriculture on the Environment: The Case of Soil Erosion and Conservation 155
The "New Environmental Debates" 163
Conclusion 169

5. The New Political Economy of Agriculture: An Evaluation 171

Introduction 171

Major Theoretical Trends in the Sociology of Agriculture 171
Major Gaps in the Sociology of Agriculture 181
Conclusion 186
Notes 186

6. Rural Sociological Research on Agriculture: A Backward Glance Toward the Future 187

References 197

Name Index 243

Subject Index 253