

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	1
Puzzled organizations	3
An investigation into tacit knowledge in its real life settings	3
1 Knowledge within Organizations	7
Organizing as sense making	7
The creation of organizational knowledge	16
The conversion of organizational knowledge	23
Conclusion	31
Note	33
2 Tormented Knowledge	34
‘It’s beyond my control’	34
Behaviours that lead to the unforeseen: Challenger	38
Ad hoc triumph or organized débâcle?	40
Conclusion	49
Notes	51
3 From Tacit to Explicit, the Conjectural Patterns of Knowing	52
From abstract generalization to conjecture	52
The tacit resources of knowledge	54
Conjectural patterns	64
Conclusion	75
Notes	77
4 Investigating the Non-Expressed	78
Realities that shirk the question	79
Tracking the tacit	92
Limitations of the non-observable	110
Notes	117

5 Qantas, or Collective Wisdom	119
Qantas Airways, Sydney (1986–93)	119
A practice-embodied knowledge	133
Notes	138
6 Indigo, or Navigating in the Tacit	139
Indigo, Washington and Paris (1984–94)	139
An exemplary 'management' of knowledge	148
7 Indosuez, or Elusive Know-how	155
Bank Indosuez, New York (1986–94)	155
Incompatible knowledge?	169
8 Pechiney, in a Too Explicit World	176
Pechiney, Guinea (1950–70)	176
A knowledge lost in its explicitation	191
Notes	195
9 The Tacit Foundations of Organizations	197
Executives and tacit knowledge	197
Competitive advantage and tacit knowledge	212
Strategists and tacit knowledge management	218
Note	223
Conclusion	224
Changing knowledge modes	227
Vertiginous matter, essential to the competitiveness of organizations	229
Bibliography	231
Case Study References	249
Qantas, or collective wisdom	249
Indigo, or navigating in the tacit	250
Indosuez, or elusive know-how	251
Pechiney, in a too explicit world	252
Index	255