

CONTENTS

About the Author	xi
Contributor	xii
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgments	xvii
Introduction	1
Elizabeth Sparks
The Social Construction of Child Abuse	1
Overview of Child Abuse Research	4
The Effects of Abuse on Children	6
Characteristics of Abusive Families	7
Social and Environmental Factors
Associated with Child Abuse	9
The Child Welfare System	10
PART I: CONCEPTUAL BACKGROUND	17
Chapter 1. The Importance of Patterns	19
Family Patterns Reproduced in the Child	19
Individual Patterns Reproduced in the Family	23
The Case of Sexual Abuse	27
Patterns Changed from Within	30
Generic Solutions Fail	31
Chapter 2. Patterns in the Mind	35
Constant Imagination	36
Purposes of Imagination	37
How Imagination Is Revealed	41
How Imagination Is Suppressed	43
The Effects of Punishment	44
Early Memories As Road Maps	46
Figures in a Landscape	47

Complexes	48
Autonomy of Figures	49
Chapter 3. A Systemic View of the Psyche	53
Circular Thinking	53
Projective Identification	57
Identity and the Quest to Be Oneself	59
When, Not Whether	61
Assessment Hygiene	63
Dialogue Between Psychic Figures	64
Possession by a Single Figure	68
Overgovernance versus Undergovernance	70
Misconstruing the Child As a Precursor to Maltreatment	73
PART II: GENERAL PATTERNS IN ABUSE AND NEGLECT	79
Chapter 4. Children's Idealization of Bad Parents	81
Denial of Disappointment	81
The Need for a Parent Who Takes Responsibility	83
Blaming Others to Exonerate the Parent	84
Splitting	87
Parental Accountability	87
Self-Blame to Exonerate the Parent	91
Chapter 5. "At Least I'm Not As Bad As My Mother (or Father)"	95
Focus on the Parent at the Expense of the Child	95
Chapter 6. The Avoidance of Personal Closeness	99
Fears and Joys of Intimacy	99
Excessive Kindness in Service Providers	103
Advantages of Cross-Cultural Foster Placements	104
Disadvantages of Ideal Foster Placements	108
Chapter 7. Seriously Disturbed Patterns	111
The Use and Misuse of the Borderline Label	111
Fragmentation	115

Identity Diffusion	116
Boundary Problems	119
Rage and Abandonment Fears	122
The Maternal Hold	123
Impulsivity	125
Implications for Service Planning	126
PART III: SOME SPECIFIC MALTREATMENT PATTERNS	135
Chapter 8. The Sexual Abuse Victim's Mother	137
The Perpetrator, the Victim, and the Mother	137
The Futility of Blame	139
Repeat Involvement with Sex Offenders	142
Damage Assessment	145
A Good Apology	146
Chapter 9. The Sexually Powerful Adolescent Girl	151
The Narcissistic Father and the Depressed Mother	151
Socializing Girls to Be Depressed	152
The Choice Between Sex Appeal and Skills	154
The Limitations of Residential Treatment	157
Chapter 10. The Disruptive Boy	161
The Ineffective Disciplinarian	161
Indoctrination into the Abusive Role	161
The Legacy of Punishment	164
Interpersonal Basis of Self-Control	168
Chapter 11. The Absent Parent Returned	171
The Child Put On Hold	172
Responsibility for the Absence	172
Making Amends	174
The Child's Point of View	175

PART IV: INTERVENTION PATTERNS	177
Chapter 12. Dysfunctional Treatment Relationships	181
The Need to Enter Patterns to Change Them	182
The Risk of Replication	184
Assuming Distasteful Roles	187
Chapter 13. Role Ambiguity Among Service Providers	191
Structural Clarity	191
Clinicians and Attorneys	192
Clinicians and Social Workers	196
Clinicians and Custodians	200
Chapter 14. The Social Worker and the Family	205
How the Family Accommodates the Social Worker	205
Structural Ambiguity Between Social Worker and Parent	205
The Social Worker's Rationale	206
Cultural Relativism and the Child Welfare System	207
Levels of Parental Fitness and the Social Worker's
Approach to the Family	210
Voluntary Cases	212
Protective Cases	214
Custodial Cases	216
Chapter 15. The State Social Worker in the Role of Parenting Conscience	219
The Ignoring Parent	219
The Resigned Parent	219
The Rebellious Parent	221
Chapter 16. When All Else Fails	227
The Myth That All Children Are Treatable	227
Dominion Over the Self	229
Emancipation As a Strategy	231
Gaining Control Over Reinforcers	233
References	235
Index	241