Contents

Acknowledgments

INTRODUCTION

Servants of Power or Providers of Indispensable Ideas?
The Role of Scientists and the Use of Social Science in the Making of the European Union
Max Haller

PART ONE: Europe as Economic and Monetary Union: Market Integration without Institutional Adaptation?

Economic Integration and the Welfare State: The Corridor Model as a Strategy for an European Social Policy
Klaus Busch

Preconditions for the Success of the European Monetary Union
Helmut Wagner

Freeing the Market through Declining Trade Unions or Loss of an Important Integrating Institution?
Jelle Visser

PART TWO: A New European Model of Welfare or Splitting into a Rich and Poor Europe?

Social Citizenship, Work and Care – Social Differentiation among Women in an EU-Context
Thomas P. Boje

Social Exclusion and Poverty in Europe: New Social Problems and New Priorities for Social Research
Luís Capucha, Joaquim Bernardo and José Castro

The Contribution of Spatial Planning to Social Cohesion in the European Union
Richard H. Williams
PART THREE: The Construction of the European Constitution. Chances and Threats of Civil Society and Democratic Participation

The Constitutionalisation and Democratisation of the European Union: Political Science between Interpretation and Prescription
Heidrun Abromeit

Policy Networks in Europe: Challenges for Democratic Organization and Citizen Voice in the European Process
Alison E. Woodward

A European Internal and Security Policy: Freedom of Movement for Whom?
Juan Diez-Nicolás and Juan Diez-Medrano

Deficit of Confidence within European Democracies
Mattei Dogan

PART FOUR: Politics of Equality and Difference: Transformation of Gender Roles and Labour Markets, Cultural and National Identities

Alternative European Models of Women's Roles in the Family and the Labour Market
Catherine Hakim

Education and Labour Market Outcomes: Commonality or Divergence?
Walter Müller

Immigration to Europe and its Consequences for the Host Societies
Rainer Münz and Wolfgang Seifert

Education and Political Socialisation between National Identity and European Citizenship
Gaspare Nevola

CONCLUSION

The Model of Science and Research Policy of the European Union in Perspective
Max Haller

The Authors