

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
The research: emergent identities, masculinities and 11–14-year-old boys	5
Findings	10
The interviewer's experience	16
Structure of the book	18
1 Boys talk	22
Introduction: getting boys to talk	22
Difficult interviews	25
Boys' experiences of the interview and the interviewer	28
Performing in interviews	32
Being serious and 'softer' in the individual interviews	32
Being 'free' and 'funny' in group interviews	35
Talking man to man in the group	36
Mixed-gender interviews	38
Talking about bullying in individual rather than group interviews	39
Resisting 'softer' relations with the interviewer	40
Finding it difficult to speak about topics in the multiethnic group interview	42
Monoethnic interviews with black and Asian boys and the significance of 'racial' identities and racism	43
Talking to a white interviewer	44
Monoethnic interviews with white boys	46
Conclusion	47
2 Lads, machos and others: developing 'boy-centred' research	50
Introduction	50
Boys as active subjects	52

The intersection of gender, class, 'race' and sexuality	53
The vulnerability of masculine identities and emotional expression	58
Femininity and homosexuality	62
Constructing the fiction of an essential masculinity from multiple positions	67
Conclusion	72
3 'Hegemonic' masculinities	75
How can we understand masculinities?	75
Constructing narratives of popularity	76
Negotiating the limitations of hegemonic masculinity	83
Hegemonic masculinities and social class	90
Conclusion	97
4 Boys talking about girls	99
Introduction	99
Sporty boys and unsporty girls	100
Girls' obsession with their looks	101
Humourless and mature girls	102
Praising girls	106
Being different from other boys in relation to girls	107
Talking about girls in different kinds of interview	109
Girlfriends	115
Conclusion	120
5 Girls about boys	123
Introduction	123
'Disgusting ... horrible': girls talking about boys in individual interviews	124
Boys and peer pressure	124
Nice boys	125
Wanting boys to control their wild nature	126
Nice boys, tough boys and 'race'	127
Girls on football	129
Talking	130
Liking being girls and not boys	131
Being like boys	133
Mixed-gender interviews	134

Difficult and hostile interviews	136
Girls as more mature than boys	137
Conclusion	143
6 Ethnic identity, 'race' and young masculinities	146
'It doesn't matter what race you are'	147
'There's very little difference between people of different races, only the way they've been brought up'	149
Ethnic identities	158
Racism	165
Conclusion	174
7 Policing young masculinities	175
Introduction	175
Being with girls and transgressing gender boundaries	176
Mixing too much with boys	182
The viewpoints of boys mocked as gay	183
Just cussing	187
Trying not to show interest in other boys' looks	189
Idealising girls and homophobia	190
Envy and blaming girls	193
Addressing homophobia in schools	194
8 Boys and schooling	196
Introduction	196
Constructed oppositions between popular masculinity and doing schoolwork	197
Negotiating the expectations of popular masculinities and the dangers of unpopular masculinities	200
Things change over time	215
The impact of teachers on boys	217
Masculinities and attainment	223
9 On the way to adulthood: relationships with parents	225
What do parents offer?	226
Mothers' seriousness, fathers' immaturity	231
Separated fathers	245
When relationships fail	247
Conclusion	254

Conclusion	256
What to do about boys	261
Appendices	266
1 Details of individual and group interviews conducted with boys and girls	266
2 Characteristics of the participants	270
3 Protocol for group interviews	271
4 Protocol for individual interviews	273
5 Protocol for individual interviews with girls	277
References	279
Index	287