

Contents

Preface and acknowledgements	ix
1 Anti-social policy?	1
Liberalism and the 'anti-social' market	3
Restructuring 'the social'	7
2 The difficulty with 'the social'	11
Confronting civil society	13
Dimensions of 'the social'	16
Conclusion	45
3 The emergence of a disciplinary social policy	47
Class and classification	50
The political economy of the Gospel	56
Investigating the poor	61
The labour of reform: the burden of philanthropy	67
Lessons from philanthropy	68
4 Discipline and division in the nineteenth-century Poor Law	71
Poor Law strategy: success or failure?	82
The 'rising tide' of pauperism and the 'crisis' of relief	85
Social pathology and the poor	92
Controlling the new 'residuum'	98
5 A new politics of needs: from moralism to normalisation	102

viii Contents

Labour, discipline and compulsion	103
Debates about discipline	108
Efficiency and the prevention of destitution	114
Morals, mathematics and insurance	127
Tests and regulations	134
6 In the shadows of state welfare	141
The real politics of social security	141
Beveridge and the social state	143
The political economy of incentives	146
Traces of discipline and deterrence	152
The question of 'abuse'	158
Protecting public funds	165
From poverty to social pathology	168
7 Free markets, active citizens and 'anti-social' policies	178
Enterprise, ideology and modern needs	178
'Invisible hands' and free markets: the limits of 'the social'	184
The fabrication of the 'genuine claimant'	193
'Anti-social' policies and the disciplinary state	199
Conclusion I: in Praise of Good Samaritans	203
Conclusion II: new times – new 'social' movements?	207
References	211
Index	225