

Contents

Foreword	Michael Emerson	ix
Preface		xi
1 Introduction	David G. Mayes	1
The estimation of the impact of the 1992 programme		2
The scope of the study		5
The impact of the Single Market		8
The response of firms to the Single Market		13
The remainder of the book		21
Concluding remarks		25
References		27
Notes		27
2 The automobile industry	Didier Salvadori	28
Introduction		28
Current structures in the automobile sector and main structural developments since the first oil crisis		30
The setting up of the Single Market		56
The strategies at work		73
Conclusion		89
3 The truck industry	Leo Sleuwaegen	92
Introduction		92
Industry environment and structural analysis		93

	The competitive process		111
	Corporate strategies		116
	Future developments		122
	References		128
	Notes		129
4	The railway industry	David G. Mayes	130
	Introduction		130
	The structure and recent history of the rail and railway equipment industries		133
	The forces for change from the 1992 programme		143
	The implications for strategic change in the industry		148
	Internal strategies for the firm in the face of competitive pressure		152
	Illustrations from particular firms		157
	Conclusion		161
5	Airlines	Gernot Klepper	162
	Structure		163
	1992 impact: deregulation		170
	Company strategies in a deregulated market		171
	Structure and performance after 1992		180
	References		182
6	The aerospace industry	Gernot Klepper	184
	Industry structure		185
	Changing environment of 1992 for the aerospace industry		199
	Company strategies in the completed Internal Market		203
	Conclusion		206
	References		206
7	Electronic components and semiconductors	Harry P. Bowen	209
	The electronics industry in Europe		210
	Components and semiconductors industry		218
	Company strategies		240
	The 1992 initiative		251

8	Consumer electronics	Harry P. Bowen	255
	The consumer electronics industry		255
	The 1992 initiative		266
9	Office machinery, data processing and information technology	Isabelle Pouplier	269
	The structure of the information technology sector and recent developments		269
	Likely changes in the information technology sector following the setting up of the Internal Market		292
	Internal strategies		297
	External strategies		312
	Appendix I		327
	Appendix II		332
	Appendix III		333
	References		333
	Notes		334
10	The chemical and pharmaceutical industries	Elisabeth de Ghellinck	337
	The general approach to 1992		337
	The main companies in the chemical, pharmaceutical and artificial fibres sectors in Europe		341
	The evolution of the strategy of chemical firms		343
	The likely impact of 1992		346
	Specific markets		349
	Conclusion		368
	Notes		370
11	The steel and metal industry	Gernot Klepper	372
	Introduction		372
	Industry structure		374
	Regulation of the industry		379
	Company strategies		380
	Industry structure after 1992		384
	References		385
12	The machine tool industry	David G. Mayes	386
	Introduction		386
	The structure of the machine tool industry		389
	The impact of the Single Market		401

viii Contents

	The strategic response by firms	406
	The exploitation of external linkages	409
	References	421
13	Financial strategies Joëlle Laudy	422
	Introduction	422
	The range of structures of resources of industrial firms	423
	The influence of the national financial environment	425
	The influence of the regulatory environment	429
	Characteristics of the firm itself	430
	Conclusion	432