

Contents

Preamble	ix
List of Participants in the Penelope Project	x
Acknowledgements	xii
Introduction and Executive Summary	1
Notes	7
1 Competition and Strategic Capability: Some Basic Concepts	8
1.1 Industrial competitiveness	8
1.2 New forms of competition	9
1.2.1 Competition by innovation and technical progress	9
1.2.2 Global competition	11
1.3 Competitive advantages	13
1.4 Strategic capability	15
1.4.1 A sound base or the importance of 'turnaround'	15
1.4.2 Development and management of key resources	16
1.4.3 Quality of strategic choice	17
1.4.4 Capacity for innovation and change	17
1.5 The value chain and industrial cooperation	18
1.6 Importance of the environment	19
1.7 Corporate and societal responsibilities	20
1.8 Competition: a destructive or creative process?	22
1.8.1	22
1.8.2	24
Notes	26

2	Some Thoughts on the Competitiveness of European Enterprises	28
2.1	Unequal competitiveness	28
2.1.1	World leaderships	28
2.1.2	Disturbing lags	32
2.2	A process destroying or enhancing competitiveness?	35
2.2.1	The American model	35
2.2.2	The Japanese model	39
2.2.3	The European model	47
2.3	Example of the electronics industry	53
2.3.1	Europe lags overall but has some successes	54
2.3.2	Computers	57
2.3.3	Components	60
2.3.4	Telecommunications	64
	Notes	77
3	International Cooperation	80
3.1	Direct investment abroad	80
3.2	Cooperation as a competitive strategy	88
3.2.1	Different forms	88
3.2.2	An external strategic weapon which can lead to dominance	90
3.3	Management of cooperation	95
3.3.1	Day-to-day management	96
3.3.2	Strategic management	98
3.4	Cooperation and competitive models	99
3.4.1	The Japanese model	100
3.4.2	The American model	102
3.4.3	The European model	103
3.5	The case of the aviation industry	106
3.5.1	Vital need for cooperation	107
3.5.2	Airbus: an example of successful cooperation	110
3.5.3	The importance of management models: the case of military aircraft	115
3.6	Brief description of other cases	118
3.6.1	Importance of strategic cooperation management: the case of the computer	118

3.7	SME cooperation	121
3.8	The case of engineering	122
Notes		124
4	Research and Innovation	127
4.1	Much European R&D but little exploitation	128
4.2	The reason lies more with the corporate strategy than the R&D	131
4.2.1		131
4.2.2		133
4.3	External incentives to competitive innovation	135
4.3.1	The market or demand	135
4.3.2	Technological opportunities or supply	138
4.3.3	The industrial structure	140
4.4	R&D cooperation	143
4.4.1	Motivation for R&D cooperation	144
4.4.2	Forms of R&D cooperation	148
4.4.3	Radial cooperation	151
4.4.4	Unequal cooperation	152
4.5	Management of R&D and innovation	153
4.5.1	Exploiting the technological environment	153
4.5.2	Close relation between R&D and marketing	155
4.5.3	Management of research staff	155
4.5.4	R&D decentralisation and integration	157
4.5.5	Innovation as an entrepreneurial process	158
4.5.6	Management of technological resources	158
4.5.7	Role of top management	160
Notes		160
Final Comments		163
	Sense of urgency	163
	Priority mechanisms of a global approach	164
	Concluding thoughts	169
Notes		170
Appendices		171
Notes		218
References		219
Index		226