

Contents

Editorial Foreword to the Series	ix
Preface	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii
1. Work, Employment and Family Functioning	1
Work and family functioning in the twentieth century: an historical synopsis.....	1
Assumption 1: Unidirectional effects of work on family life.....	4
Assumption 2: Work exerts an inevitably negative effect on family life.....	5
Assumption 3: Sex biases in the link between work and family life.....	6
The importance of studying work and family functioning.....	6
Outline of the text.....	10
2. Work, Employment and Family Functioning: Conceptual and Definitional Issues	12
An 'open system' approach to understanding employment and family functioning.....	12
Classifying events and their outcomes: stressors, stress and strain.....	13
The effect of stressor type on the duration and nature of strain.....	16
Are different coping strategies required for different stressors?.....	18
Interactions between different types of stressors.....	19
Clarifying the term 'work'.....	19
Employment and employment stressors.....	20
Family functioning.....	23
Going beyond the family and employment systems.....	27
Conclusion.....	28
3. Objective Employment Characteristics and Marital Functioning	29
Temporal employment characteristics and marital functioning.....	29
Employment time and marital functioning.....	30

Shift work and marital functioning	40
The 'family work day'	47
Flexible work schedules and marital functioning	49
Job-related transfers and marital functioning	53
Objective employment characteristics and marital functioning: conclusion	61
4. Subjective Employment Experiences and Marital Functioning	62
Job stress and marital functioning	63
Employment experiences and marital satisfaction	67
Job satisfaction and marital satisfaction	72
Perceived financial strain and marital functioning	78
Type A behaviour and marital functioning	80
Subjective employment experiences and marital functioning: conclusion	87
5. Wives' Subjective Employment Status and Marital Functioning	88
Wives' employment status and marital functioning	91
Wives' employment status and husbands' marital functioning	100
Status incompatibility: relative occupational status of spouses	107
Wives' employment status and marital functioning: conclusion	111
6. Wives' Subjective Employment Experiences and Marital Functioning	113
Wives' job experiences and psychological well-being	114
The many roles of employed wives	115
Going beyond inter-role conflict: additional role experiences	127
Wives' subjective employment experiences and marital functioning: conclusion	128
7. Maternal Employment and Children's Behaviour: New Perspectives on an Old Phenomenon	130
Maternal employment status and children's behaviour	135
Maternal employment status and mother—child interactions	141
Maternal employment status: conclusion	147
Maternal employment experiences and children's behaviour	149
Children's perceptions of maternal employment	159
Future directions for understanding and researching maternal employment	160
Maternal employment and children's behaviour: conclusion	161

8. Fathers' Employment and Children's Behaviour	162
Fathers' objective employment characteristics and their children	163
Intergenerational occupational choice: like father, like son?	171
Fathers' subjective work experiences and their children's behaviour ...	178
Fathers' employment and their children: conclusion	184
9. Unemployment and Family Functioning	187
Contrasting unemployment in the 1930s and 1980s	188
Unemployment as a major psychosocial stressor	190
Unemployment and psychological well-being	191
Unemployment and marital functioning	194
Unemployment, parent—child interactions and child behaviour	204
Unemployment, parent—child interactions and child behaviour: conclusion	214
Unemployment and family functioning: an agenda for future research and theory	215
Unemployment and family functioning: conclusion	223
10. Employment, Stress and Family Functioning:
Concluding Thoughts	224
Assumption 1: Unidirectional effects of employment on family life	224
Assumption 2: Employment exerts an inevitably negative effect on family life	225
Assumption 3: Sex biases in the link between work and family life ...	226
Conceptual issues in the interdependence between family and employment	228
Implications for research on employment and the family	231
Clinical vs statistical effects of employment on family functioning	232
Practical implications	234
Some remaining employment/family issues	238
Conclusion	240
References	241
Author Index	271
Subject Index	283