

Contents

---

|   |            |
|---|------------|
| List of figures   | vi         |
| List of tables  | vii        |
| General introduction  | ix         |
| 1 A strategy of change: outlining the terrain                | 1   |
| 2 Contrasting analytical approaches to organizational change | 16  |
| 3 Planned versus emergent change processes                   | 25  |
| 4 The process and implementation of strategic change         | 48  |
| 5 Organizational culture and change                          | 69  |
| 6 Programmed approaches to organizational change             | 92  |
| 7 A strategy of change: some conclusions                     | 120 |
| Notes   | 130        |
| References  | 133        |
| Index   | 143        |

Figures

---

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| 1.1 A characterization of approaches to organizational change               | 10  |
| 3.1 Change strategies and conditions for their use                          | 31  |
| 3.2 The Open Systems perspective  | 43  |
| 4.1 The four-cell model as redrawn to show the dominance of functionalism   | 51  |
| 5.1 Organizational culture in the context of the sociology of organizations | 71  |
| 5.2 Culture change in Yorkshire   | 74  |
| 6.1 Towards transformation via the virtuous circle of quality               | 94  |
| 6.2 The bodies that run the Management Charter Initiative                   | 109 |
| 6.3 The Blake and Mouton managerial grid                                    | 111 |

Tables

---

|   |           |
|---|-----------|
| 2.1 Levels of organizational change, classified by degree of change                            | 20 |
| 3.1 Lewin's equilibrium: driving and restraining forces for organizational change              | 29 |
| 5.1 British companies which achieved successful change by breaking away from strategic recipes | 85 |