

Contents

Foreword – Sir Peter Parker LVO	xiv
Preface	xv
Glossary	xviii

PART I – Background and Practices

Chapter 1

Setting the scene

Introduction	1
The pre-war development	1
The period up to the ‘Take-off’ (1868–1890)	2
Education system
The middle period (1890–1920)	8
The third period (1920–1945)	12
In-company training – pre-Second World War
Mitsubishi Yōwakai (Mitsubishi Association for Promotion of Harmony)
Nissan Konwakai (discussion meeting)
Employers Organization
Kyōchōkai, (Co-operation Society)
Management studies as a academic business discipline
The post-war period up to the mid-80s	25
The first decade after the Second World War (1945–1955)	25
The period of turmoil 1945–1948
The period of recovery and expansion 1948–1955
Preparation for expansion (1956–1960)	37
Maturity of in-company education (1961–1973)	38
The two oil crises and recovery (1974–1984)	39
From 1985 onwards	41
Japan’s direct overseas investment	41
Yen revaluation	44
Internationalization	46
Domestic pressures	47
Change in the consumption patterns	47
Demographic factors	49
Women in labour market	50
US–Japan Comparative Survey on Working Women

Shorter working hours	63
Inter-firm mobility	64
Attitude changes in the younger generation	64
The future of the lifetime employment system	65
The corporate context	66
The lifetime employment system	68
Manpower adjustment	71
Endnotes to Chapter 1	73

Chapter 2

The role of the government and peak economic organizations in human resources development

Introduction	83
The education system	84
School education	84
Education in the universities	85
Postgraduate adult education as part of lifelong education	86
Government measures for human resources development	91
Lifelong capability development grant scheme	91
Vocational capability development promotion law	93
Lifelong education	94
Education for Datsu-kaisha Ningen
The peak economic organizations	96
Keidanren	97
Nisshō	100
Nikkeiren	101
Keizai Dōyūkai	102
Members' activities
The committee activities group
The international exchanges business group
The seminars and survey groups
The Liaison group
An example of committee work
Endnotes to Chapter 2	110

Chapter 3

Japanese management structure and functions

Introduction	113
Management structure	114
Keieishasō (top management) – the executive level	114
Other characteristics of the Yakuinkai	115
Kaichō (the chairman)	116
Shachō (the president)	117
Yakuinkai (the Board of Directors)	119
Renumeration	123

Selection of board members	124
The case of Nomura Securities	124
Kanrishaso (Middle Management)	126
Seishain (Management cadre)	126
Trade union membership	127
Shokunō Shikaku Seido – grading and posts	127
The early 1970s	128
The late 1970s	129
In the 1980s	130
The grading system	130
Middle management in the workforce	132
Buchō	134
Kachō	136
Decision-making processes	145
Top-level decision-making	146
Decision-making at middle management levels	147
The ringi system	147
Communication	149
Endnotes to Chapter 3	150

Chapter 4

Personnel management processes

Recruitment	157
The new graduate intake – the sōgōshoku category	157
The process of recruitment
Sellers' market and starting salaries
Mid-career entry	164
A sign of change
Interfirm mobility
Job rotation	168
Job rotation by company order	168
The annual redeployment exercises (Jinji Idō)
Job rotation by personal choice – Shanai Kōboseido	172
Self-declaration (Jiko Shinkōku)	172
Moving to a new post without the family (Tanshin Hunin)	173
Secondment (Shukkō)	174
Career Development Programme (CDP)	176
The case of Toshiba
The case of Mobile Oil Japan
Promotion, evaluation and reward	182
Promotion
Advantages and disadvantages of the late promotion system
Procedures for promotion to the directors' board
Promotion by election
Promotion through the President's Academy
Promotion through application – by internal advertisement
Case studies in internal advertisement system
From the negative assessment to the positive assessment

Evaluation	192
Functions of the status grading system (Shokunō Shikaku Seido)
Personnel rating system (Jinji Kōka Seido)
Upgrading examinations
Assessment tests
Reward	202
Retirement
Managerial progression and the issues of generalist/specialist dichotomy	210
The trends	214
Endnotes to Chapter 4	215

Chapter 5

In-company education

Introduction	221
In-company education	223
Rank-related education and training	224
Capability development of kachō
Capability development of buchō
Educational measures to retain new recruits
Functional skill-related education and training	225
Education of specific groups	226
The capability development of female employees
The education of the (forty-five plus) age group
Main methods of in-company education and training	227
On-the-job training	229
Off-the-job training	235
The state of 'collective' education of managers
Self-development	238
Methods of management development	240
Reading
Correspondence courses
In-company management capability development	244
Induction training	244
Solid middle (Chūken Shain) education and training	247
On-the-job training and rotation
On-the-job training for new entrants
Off-the-job orientated training
Functional skills orientated training
One-off innovative management training programmes
Outward-bound courses
Self-development
Management Development	253
Direct guidance by the president
Attendance at external seminars, workshops etc.
Collective in-company courses
Long-term studies in external organizations
Self-development

Other group- and function-related education programmes	264
Education and training programmes for business internationalization	264
Tōshiba programme of internationalization
Internationalization education: All Japan Air Freight
International management ability development course: San'yō Electric
Providers of education in internationalization
Development of female employees	270
Case study 1: NTT
Case study 2: Takashimaya department store
Case study 3: Tōkyō Bank
Case study 4: Mrs R. Murakoshi, Jichō, Fair Market Operations Department, NTT
Case study 5: four other female managers
Case study 6: Asahi Beer Company
Capability development of the forty-five plus age group	284
Case study: Nihon Bikutā (JVC)
Expenditure on education and development	289
'Collective' education and training expenditure	290
Company-owned training centres	293
Capability development function	294
The future	297
Endnotes to Chapter 5	298

PART II – Training Courses and Personnel Development

Chapter 6

Personnel practices and capability development

Introduction	305
The board members	305
In-house seminar programmes	306
Correspondence courses	310
Bought-in courses	310
External courses	311
External seminars	312
Twentieth Nihon Keieishadantai Rengōkai Seminar
JPC Karuizawa top management seminar
Overseas industrial missions	315
Other one-day and evening seminars	316
The Buchō	316
The President's Private Academy	317
Private academy – E & T version	321
Bought-in courses held in-house	324
External courses	324
Short courses
Long courses
JPC monthly seminars and study meetings for Buchō	329
Overseas study tours	329
Summary	329

The Kachō	329
In-company OffJT programmes	331
External courses	335
Longer courses	338
Japan Productivity Centre Management Academy courses	338
Japan Management Association's Management Institute courses	340
Evaluation of the effect of the courses	341
The management cadre	341
In-company education programme	343
Company-wide examples	343
Buchō development programme
First example – Asahi Beer	346
Basic approach to capability development
Aims and methods of capability development
Level-related courses
Function/skill-related courses
Second example – Mitsubishi Electric	358
The new corporate ideal	359
Business objectives
Capability development
Historical background
Management education at Mitsubishi Electric Industries today
Management education for the affiliated companies
Self-development courses for managers
Third example – Nihon Kōkan Kabushiki Kaisha (Japan Steel Pipes) NKK	371
Management capability development
Outline of management education system
Main management courses
Endnotes to Chapter 6	378

Chapter 7

Examples from retailing and banking

Introduction	381
JUSCO	382
The Sector	382
The company	383
Board of Directors
Organization
Recruitment	388
Mid-career recruits
Women
The role of education	391
Management Development System
Sales Expert Training System
OJT Sales Expert Training System
Up-grading examinations
The Company University
Postgraduate School
In-house function-related Off-JT courses for middle management
External function-related seminars

Overseas seminars
Correspondence courses
Personnel procedures	404
Rotation
Personnel Rating System
The Self-Declaration System	407
Reward
Recapitulation	409
Mitsui Trust and Banking	410
The company	410
Board of Directors
Middle Management
Recruitment	416
Mid-career hiring
Women
The role of education	418
New entrants' Education
Correspondence courses
English conversation courses
In-house education for the Chūken Shain (The Solid Middle)
OJT and self-development for managers
OffJT courses for managers
Saturday Morning Study Meetings
Education for Internationalization
Revitalization courses for the 45-plus age group
Personnel Processes	430
Rotation
Evaluation – Personnel Rating System
Reward
Personal Declaration System
Conclusion	437
Endnotes to Chapter 7	440

Chapter 8

External education organizations

Introduction	443
Consultants	444
Corporate external education organizations	446
The All Japan Federation of Management Organizations	449
Academics in business education	453
External education providers	454
The Japan Productivity Centre (JPC)	455
Organizational structure and activities
Management education programmes
The Japan Management Association (JMA)	462
JMA Management School
Japan Management Institute

JMA publications
JMA special studies
The Japan Industrial Training Vocational Association (JIVTA)	471
Main courses for management
Management training programme (MTP)
Management by objectives course
Training within industry (TWI)
Nihon Keiei Kyōkai (Nippon Omni-Management Association (NOMA))	474
Human resources development business education
Local government and general administrative education
OA fairs and exhibitions
General business services
Awards and competitions
International exchange
Membership services
Japan Management School	477
Correspondence courses
Open seminars
In-house model courses
Supply of lecturers
Publication
Development of teaching materials
Management consultancy
PHP Institute Inc.	478
Research
Publishing
Education
The Matsushita Institute of Government and Management	483
Sannō University	484
Sannō University Management School
Sannō institute of management
Sannō management school
Sannō university press
Keiō Gijuku University	487
Keiō Gijuku University Graduate School of Business Administration
The Keiō University Business School
Aoyama Gakuin University	489
Aoyama Gakuin Graduate School of International Politics and Economics	489
Manager Training School	491
‘Hell Training’
Union of Japanese Scientists and Engineering – JUSE	493
Jekku	497
Courses for management
Consultancy
The Manabisuto Grand Story Prize
Publishing
Miyamoto Management Institute
Other business educational organizations	499
Other elements in the external resources	500
Endnotes to Chapter 8	504

*Chapter 9The future of management development

Introduction	507
Changes in the key issues of business management and personnel and capability development	509
Business management	509
1985 report
1990 report
Within five years
Groups at which capability development is targeted	510
1985 survey
1990 survey
Within five years
The future for other personnel practices	511
Personnel management practices	511
1990 survey
Within five years
Changes in the focus for capability development	512
1990 survey
Within five years
Issues faced by the capability development department	513
1990 survey
Within five years
Management development in the 1990s	513
Capability development measures for executives and middle management	514
The state of OffJT provision for management	516
Changes in the trend of key contents for OffJT
Per-capita number of days spent on OffJT per year
Education budget
Corporate support given to self-development undertakings	520
Conclusion	520
Endnotes to Chapter 9	525
Postscript	529
Appendixes	533
Bibliography	543
Further articles for reference	547