

Table of Contents

1	Why Relevance in International Management Research? Durhane Wong-Rieger	1
1.1	Introduction	1
1.2	Overview of the Problem of Relevance	1
1.3	Why Academic Research Cannot Change	4
1.4	References	6
2	International Management Research: Past, Present, and Future David Ricks	9
2.1	Progress in International Management Research to Date	9
2.2	Future Research Topics	10
2.3	Appendix	12
3	Future Directions in International Comparative Management Research Richard B. Peterson	13
3.1	Introduction	13
3.2	A Future Agenda	20
3.3	Illustrative Cases	23
3.4	References	24
4	Global Firms and Nation States Stephen J. Kobrin	27
4.1	Global Firms and Global Competition	27
4.2	Nation-States and the State System	29
4.3	The State and Multinational Firms	30
4.4	Implications	31
4.5	References	32
5	Research in International Human Resource Management Rosalie Tung and Betty Jane Punnett	35
5.1	Introduction	35
5.2	Future Directions for IHRM Research	36

5.3	General Research Frameworks	39
5.4	Status of the Field	42
5.5	Future Research Considerations	44
5.6	Conclusion	52
5.7	References	53
6	A Strategic Phase Approach to International Human Resources Management
	Nancy J. Adler and Fariborz Ghadar	55
6.1	Introduction	55
6.2	Global Strategy from the Perspective of Culture	56
6.3	The Consequences of Culture	59
6.4	International Human Resource Management	60
6.5	Future Research Implications	69
6.6	Conclusion	73
6.7	References	73
7	Beyond Bureaucracy: Towards a Comparative Analysis of Forms of Economic Resource Co-ordination and Control
	S. Gordon Redding	79
7.1	Introduction	79
7.2	The Unit of Economic Action	81
7.3	Forms of Economic Organization and their Contents	83
7.4	Implications	96
7.5	References	97
8	Globalization: Separating the Fad from the Fact
	Henry Mintzberg	99
8.1	Why Global?	99
8.2	What's Global?	101
8.3	What Consequence Global?	102
9	Research in International Business: A Canadian Perspective
	Alan M. Rugman	105
9.1	Introduction	105
9.2	The Policy Relevance of International Business	106
9.3	Research Themes in International Business in Canada	107
9.4	Future Research Topics: A Canadian Perspective	109
9.5	Survey of Canadian Research Articles	110

10	International Management: A Field in Transition – What Will It Take To Reach Maturity? Edwin L. Miller	115
10.1	The Need for International Management Research	115
10.2	The Role of the Academic Researcher in the Field of International Management	123
10.3	Conclusion.	124
10.4	References	125
11	Research for International Management – Practitioners’ Perspectives W. A. Pursell and R. J. Radway	127
11.1	Introduction – A Practitioner’s View of Academic Research	127
11.2	The Roles of the University in International Management	128
11.3	The Need for Closer Links to Consultancy and Practice	129
11.4	Implications	130
11.5	Appendix 1: Response to AMA Letter may 25, 1988	131
12	Strategies for Achieving Relevance Durhane Wong-Rieger and Fritz Rieger	133
12.1	Introduction	133
12.2	Serving Two Masters: Can IM Research be Theoretical and Problem Oriented?	139
12.3	References	140
	Author biographies	143
	Subject Index	149
	Name Index	155