

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
1 Introduction	11
Points of departure	11
Assumptions and prejudices	12
Under new management	13
New employee relations	18
Employer choice in practice	20
What price the new world of work?	22
2 The Changing Face of Work	26
Introduction	26
The changing landscape	27
The drivers for change	29
The response	30
The drive for quality	31
The search for flexibility	33
Fast, flat, flexible and funky	36
Here comes 'Human Resource Management'	40
Internalising the employment relationship	41
What about the workers?	43
3 Strategy and Change in the Workplace	47
Introduction	47
Cows, dogs, cats and stars	48
Alternative approaches to strategic management	51
Strategy and structure	53
Styles	57

The human factor 59

Managing change, and changing work 61

Managing change: what managers actually do 63

'But what does it mean for me?' 66

Trust and the employment relationship 67

4 Human Resource Management 70

Introduction 70

Some definitions 71

Old wine in new bottles? 74

HRM and industrial relations 75

The reality behind the rhetoric 77

Drawing the threads together 85

5 Whatever happened to Industrial Relations? 91

Introduction 91

Back to the future 93

The cracks start appearing 97

Step-by-step-by-step-by-step 100

Drawing up the balance sheet 104

The new industrial relations settlement 106

Freedom of choice for employers 108

The new map of industrial relations 110

Conclusions 112

6 Employer Choice in Practice 116

Introduction 116

Changing the agenda 117

Seizing the initiative 121

The new mainstream 125

Focus on empowerment 128

A clear way forward? 131

The importance of 'voice' 133

Public goods and private interests 136

7 Case Studies 140

Introduction 140

Organisation A 142

H&R Johnson 148

Air Products 155

8 What Future for Trade Unions? 160

Introduction 160

The state of the unions 161

Defining success and failure 161

Managing the trade union portfolio 166

Union strategies for hard times 169

Reinventing trade unionism 177

Conclusions 190

9 Conclusions 192

The area in question 192

Shedding some light 194

The case for pluralism 200

The gap 203

Concluding points 205

Index 211