

Acknowledgements	ix
Foreword by the Rt Hon Neil Kinnock MP	xi
List of Abbreviations	xv
Introduction	xvii
Part 1 Social Values and Social Security 1979–88	1
1 Social Values and Social Security 1979–88	3
The great debate on social security 1983–6	9
The reviews: ‘open government’ in action	12
The Green Paper, June 1985	16
From consultation to action: the Green Paper, the public and Parliament	19
2 The Effects of the ‘Reforms’	24
The great ‘gainers and losers’ debate: fudging the figures	25
The ‘reform’ of housing benefits	27
The ‘reform’ of supplementary benefits: ‘From him that hath not . . .’	40
3 Women and Children Last	50
Backtracking on child benefit, or when is a promise not a promise?	52
Child benefit betrayed	56
Mean tests for families	59
Women and children: making them pay	65
4 Young People: ‘Back to Mother or Underneath the Arches’?	74

Contents

Young people and unemployment	77
Board and lodgings	82
April 1988: board and lodgings and the social security changes	87
The Fowler reviews and the under-twenty-fives	89
5 Poverty and Disability 1979–88	94
Poverty and disablement	95
The 'disastrous years': 1980–3	99
Paving the way for Fowler	101
Sickness benefit privatised	103
Caring for the carers	105
Fairer or Fowler?	107
The Independent Living Foundation: privatising help	112
April 1988	113
6 Pensions and Poverty	120
Two nations in old age	123
The attempt to abolish SERPS	126
Picking on widows	137
Pensioners and housing benefit: 'Is this what I fought for?'	139
7 'Policing the Workshy'	146
Benefits for the unemployed: twenty-five cuts	147
Abandoning the insurance principle	150
The disqualification rules: 'penal, harsh and unreasonable'	152
Availability for work: guilty until proved innocent	157
Fraud control: 'It's scum like you that ruin this society'	164
The enterprise culture: 'Oh Enterprise, what crimes are committed in thy name'	169
Part 2 The Poor Laws in the 1980s	173
Introduction	175

Contents

8	Life on Benefit: How Much Is Enough? Adequate? Could you live on this? Adequate? What does it buy? Adequate? Life on benefit? Adequacy: the government's response	177 181 181 183 187
9	Single Payments: How We Expect the Poor to Live The general conditions of entitlement to a single payment	189 191
10	Single Payments Under the Tories: Cuts and More Cuts Clothing grants Furniture and household expenses: before August 1986 August 1986: the axe falls The effects of the cuts Unfortunate by-product . . . or deliberate design?	214 214 219 229 232 236
11	The Social Fund: Let Them Have Charity The problems of single payments The social fund The social fund: the details 'Open government' in action Responses to the social fund The government's response The social fund budget The effects of the social fund: some preliminary pointers	239 239 241 243 247 248 258 259 260
12	A Poor Service for Poor People 'In some places it is very good indeed. In some places it is absolutely unacceptable' Why do poor people receive poor service? Computers to the rescue An alternative strategy: a claimants' charter	263 264 271 276 278
13	Conclusion A decade of damage	280 280

Contents

Autumn 1988: decoding the text and reading the signs	282
'There is no such thing as Society'	288
A decade of deceit	290
There is an alternative	292
Notes and Sources	295
Index	319