

CONTENTS

	Prefatory Words . . .	ix
	Introduction	xiii
1	The Five Discourses	1
	Pierre the Chanter and the Augustinian Tradition
	The Prose Salernitan Questions and the Galenic Tradition
	André the Chaplain and the Ovidian Tradition
	Jean Renart and the Tradition of Romance
	Jean Bodel and the Fabliaux Tradition
2	Participants: The Sociology of Sexuality	43
	The Physiological Parameters
	The Social Parameters
	The Marital Parameters
	On the Margin: Prostitutes and Holy Matrons
3	The Sexual Body	88
	The Learned Body
	The Body Concealed
	The Body Exposed
4	Sexual Desire	116
	Concupiscentia : The Theology of Desire
	Delectatio : The Physiology of Desire
	Passio : The Ovidian Tradition
	Joie et dolor : Their Interplay in the Romance Tradition
	Talent : The Fabliaux
	The Supremacy of Desire: Noncoital Sexuality and the Desire for God

5	Coitus	173
	Myths of Origins: Poets and Theologians
	The Physiology of Coitus
	Chastity
	Sexual Modesty
	Sexual Techniques
	Nonconsensual Coitus: From Seduction to Rape
6	Children	206
	The Physiology of Reproduction: From Conception to Birth
	The Natalist Policy of Churchmen
	Restraints on Fecundity
	The Politics of Lineage: The Romances
	Conclusions: Sexuality, Gender, and History	225
	Sexuality
	Gender
	History: A Postlude
	Appendix 1: Robert of Courson, Summa [XLII, 31, 32]	239
	Appendix 2: Pierre the Chanter, Verbum abbreviatum (Long Version)	247
	Appendix 3: Pierre the Chanter, Questiones	251
	Table 1: Fabliaux Containing Sexually Active Characters Classified by Social Group	252
	Table 2: Fabliaux Containing Sexual Encounters Classified by Ecclesiastical Categories	254
	Short Titles	255
	Notes	267
	Index	325