

Contents

	Page
INTRODUCTION: Planning for Information as a Corporate Resource Alfred Collins	1
<hr/>
PART 1 INFORMATION AS A STRATEGIC RESOURCE
Designing Information Systems for Strategic Decisions Robert L. Hayes and Raymond Radosevich	11
Competitive Information Systems Jaime I. Rodriguez and William R. King	15
Planning for Strategic Decision Support Systems William R. King	21
Information for More Effective Strategic Planning William R. King and David I. Cleland	27
<hr/>
PART 2 INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY IN THE STRATEGIC PLANNING PROCESS
Computerized Corporate Planning James B. Boulden	35
Experience with Corporate Simulation Models—A Survey Thomas H. Naylor and Horst Schauland	43
Corporate Planning Using Government Information Systems Hirohide Hinomoto and James M. Reddy	51
<hr/>
PART 3 MANAGING INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY FOR STRATEGIC IMPACT
Key Issues in Managing Information Richard Sizer	59
A Management Strategy for Information Processing Alfred Collins	69
Managing the Growth of Electronic Office Information Systems R. A. Hirschheim	77
Information Technology—Its Impact on Property Development B. C. Burrows	87
Electronic Data Interchange: How Much Competitive Advantage? Robert I. Benjamin, David W. De Long and Michael S. Scott Morton	101