

Contents

Introduction: The Problem: Pauperism and the Social Question in Prussia, 1815–70	1
Part 1: Prussian Conservatives and the Social Question	31
1. The Berliner Politisches Wochenblatt and the Beginnings of Social Conservatism in Prussia, 1830–41	33
2. A Social Kingdom to Save the Monarchy: The Social Philosophy of Josef Maria von Radowitz, 1830–53	63
3. Property, Association, and the State: The Social Conceptions of Ludwig von Gerlach, Viktor A. Huber, and Carl Rodbertus in the 1840s and 1850s	79
4. Hermann Wagener's Conservative Socialism in the Reichsgründungszeit and Social Conservatism in Prussia from the Restoration to Bismarck	101
Part 2: The Bureaucracy and the Social Question	123
5. The Reality of Bureaucratic Absolutism	125
6. The Bureaucracy and Rural Poverty: Freedom of Movement and the Need to Control	149
7. Social Protest, the Bureaucracy, and the Association for the Welfare of Workers	169
8. The Bureaucracy and the Urban Proletariat: Economic Liberalism, Conservative Patterns of Argumentation, and the Impossibility of Monolithic Rule	199
9. The Bureaucracy and Social Legislation after the Revolution	221

Contents

Epilogue: Social Conservatism, the Prussian Bureaucracy, and the Question of Continuity in German History	237
Bibliography	261
Index	287