

Contents

Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	3
I. Opium, the Orient, Imperialism, and National Identity	15
II. Pernicious Beverages: Coleridge, Opium, and Oriental Contamination	31
III. “The Causes of My Horror Lie Deep”: De Quincey, Opium, and the Excavated Oriental Origins of British Identity	46
IV. “Accepting a Matter of Opium as a Matter of Fact”: The Moonstone , Opium, and Hybrid Anglo-Indian Culture	69
V. “The Plague Spreading and Attacking Our Vitals”: The Victorian Opium Den and Oriental Contagion	83
VI. “It Begins with the Chinese, but Does Not End with Them”: Opium Smoking and the Orientalized Domestic Scene in England	103

Notes	121
Works Cited	143
Index	153

Illustrations

1.	London's East End Dock District in the Late Nineteenth Century, Western Portion	86
2.	London's East End Dock District in the Late Nineteenth Century, Eastern Portion	87
3.	"In the Den"	90
4.	"A Malay"	91