

Contents

Acknowledgments	page vii
I Democratic politics and social communication
1 The multiple levels of democratic politics	3
2 A research strategy for studying electoral politics	23
II Electoral dynamics and social communication
3 The social dynamics of political preference	45
4 Durability, volatility, and social influence	56
5 Social dynamics in an election campaign	81
III Networks, political discussants, and social communication
6 Political discussion in an election campaign	103
7 Networks in context: The social flow of political information	124
8 Choice, social structure, and the informational coercion of minorities	146
9 Discussant effects on vote choice: Intimacy, structure, and interdependence	159
10 Gender effects on political discussion: The political networks of men and women	191
IV The organizational locus of social communication
11 One-party politics and the voter revisited: Strategic and behavioral bases of partisanship	207
12 Political parties and electoral mobilization: Political structure, social structure, and the party canvass	229
13 Alternative contexts of political preference	257
14 Political consequences of interdependent citizens	282
Bibliography	293
Index	303