Contents

Exhibits xxiii
Abbreviations xxiv

Part 1 Introduction

Chapter 1 The Problem Defined
1.1 An Example 3
1.2 The Deprived Actor Research Program 4
1.3 The Collective Action Research Program 5
1.4 The Reaction to Olson: Applied Students of Collective Dissent 7
1.5 The Reaction to Olson: Pure Theorists of Collective Action 11

Chapter 2 The Approach Adopted
2.1 The Improbability of Extensive Collective Dissent: The Rebel's Dilemma 15
2.2 The Probability of Some Collective Dissent: Solutions to the Rebel's Dilemma 16
2.3 Solutions as Politics: The Origins of Collective Action 19
2.4 Solutions as Pathologies: The Outcomes of Collective Action 22
2.5 Appraising Collective Action Theories of Collective Dissent 28

Part 2 Solutions

Chapter 3 Market 35
3.1 Increase Benefits 36
3.2 Lower Costs 38
   3.2.1 No-Cost Collective Dissent 38
3.10.1.1 Other Dissident Groups 99
3.10.1.2 States 101
3.10.1.3 Other States 102
3.10.2 The Origins of Countermobilization 102
3.10.3 The Consequences of Countermobilization 104
3.11 Restrict Exit 105
3.12 Change the Type of Public Good 107
3.12.1 Seek Public Bads 107
3.12.2 Seek Nonrival Public Goods 108

Chapter 4 Community 111
4.1 Common Knowledge: Overcome Mutual Ignorance 111
4.1.1 Simultaneous Choice: Increase Mutual Expectations 111
4.1.2 Sequential Choice: Build a Bandwagon 114
4.1.2.1 The Temporal Diffusion of Collective Dissent 116
4.1.2.2 The Spatial Diffusion of Collective Dissent 118
4.2 Common Values: Overcome Pecuniary Self-Interest 120
4.2.1 Process Orientation 121
4.2.2 Other-Regardingness 124

Chapter 5 Contract 129
5.1 Types of Social Contracts 129
5.1.1 Self-Government 129
5.1.2 Tit-For-Tat 133
5.1.3 Mutual Exchange 133
5.2 The Social Origins of Social Contracts 134
5.2.1 Longevity 136
5.2.2 Homogeneity 138
5.2.3 Preexisting Organization 141
5.2.3.1 Formal Organization 145
5.2.3.2 Informal Organization 146
5.2.3.3 Social Origins 148
5.2.3.4 Political Origins 149
5.2.4 Autonomy 155
5.2.5 Stability 157
5.2.6 Concentration 158

Chapter 6 Hierarchy 167
6.1 Locate Agents or Entrepreneurs 167
6.1.1 The Importance of Entrepreneurial Activity 167
6.1.2 The Origins of Entrepreneurial Activity 171
6.1.3 The Consequences of Entrepreneurial Activity 175

6.2 Locate Principals or Patrons
6.2.1 How Patrons Help Dissidents 177
6.2.2 Why Patrons Help Dissidents 178
6.2.3 Which Patrons Help Dissidents
   6.2.3.1 The Military as an Ally 180
   6.2.3.2 The State as an Ally 182
   6.2.3.3 Nonstate Domestic Actors as Allies 188
   6.2.3.4 External Actors as Allies 189
6.2.4 What If Patrons Help Dissidents 191

6.3 Reorganize
6.3.1 Become Clubbish: Form an Exclusionary Club 193
6.3.2 Become Effective: Shape an Efficacious Group 194
6.3.3 Become Decentralized: Create a Federal Structure 197

6.4 Increase Team Competition among Allies
6.4.1 The Forms of Competition 200
6.4.2 The Causes of Competition 201
6.4.3 The Courses of Competition 203
6.4.4 The Consequences of Competition 206

6.5 Impose, Monitor, and Enforce Agreements
6.5.1 Impose Agreements 208
6.5.2 Monitor Defections 209
6.5.3 Administer Selective Incentives
   6.5.3.1 The Argument: The Centrality of Selective Incentives 210
   6.5.3.2 The Evidence: Rebels Seek Selective Incentives 211
   6.5.3.3 The Causes: Politics 215
   6.5.3.4 The Consequences: A Non-Solution? 216
6.5.4 Administer Selective Disincentives 217

Part 3 Themes

Chapter 7 Solutions as Politics: The Origins of Collective Action
7.1 The Reformist Cooperation between States and Dissidents
   7.1.1 Apolitical Production Functions 247
   7.1.2 Political Games 248
7.2 The Revolutionary Conflict between States and Dissidents 253
  7.2.1 The Revolutionary Coalition: The Rebel's Dilemma 254
  7.2.2 The Antirevolutionary Coalition: The State's Dilemma 256
  7.2.3 The Rebel's Dilemma and the State's Dilemma 258

Chapter 8 Solutions as Pathologies: The Outcomes of Collective Action 261
  8.1 The Intended Consequences of Dissident Organization 261
  8.2 The Unintended Consequences of Dissident Organization 263
    8.2.1 The Iron Laws 263
    8.2.2 The Universality of the Iron Laws 273
    8.2.3 Overcoming the Iron Laws 274
    8.2.4 The Lessons 274

Part 4 Appraisal

Chapter 9 Evaluating Collective Action Theories of Collective Dissent 279
  9.1 An Analytical Criterion: Intersolution Comparison 279
  9.2 One Empirical Criterion: Predictability 281
    9.2.1 The Complexity of the Rebel's Dilemma 282
    9.2.2 The Weakness of Grievances 282
      9.2.2.1 Neither Necessary nor Sufficient for Collective Dissent 282
      9.2.2.2 Preference Falsification 284
      9.2.2.3 The Grievance-Collective Dissent Linkage 286
    9.2.3 The Consequences for Evaluating CA Theories 289
  9.3 Two More Empirical Criteria: Lakatos and Popper 293
    9.3.1 The Criteria 294
    9.3.2 The Criteria Applied 298
      9.3.2.1 Market 299
      9.3.2.2 Community 309
      9.3.2.3 Contract 311
      9.3.2.4 Hierarchy 315
9.3.3 The Criteria's Results

9.4 Summary Evaluation

Chapter 10 Improving Collective Action Theories of Collective Dissent

10.1 Deepen the Micro

10.2 Explore the Macro

10.2.1 A Theory of Civil Society: Groups

10.2.2 A Theory of the State: Politics

10.2.3 A Theory of State-Society Linkages: Domination and Legitimacy

Chapter 11 A Final Perspective

Notes

References

Author Index

Subject Index
Exhibits

1.1 Jane's Dilemma 5
2.1 Solutions to the Collective Action Problem 21