Introduction: Thinking Through the Heart 1

PART I THE PRIVILEGED ARE NOT EXEMPT . . .

Women from every social class are battered, even those from moneyed, educated, and politically powerful families.

1 Jan 27

This descendant of pre-Depression Michigan farm real estate money, with a doctorate herself, escaped an abusive marriage to a man ambitious beyond his intellect. Her story demonstrates that battering does not always mean beating.

2 Netiva 41

This Israeli-born woman married a Jewish-American tourist and relocated to live with him in the United States. Her friendship network was critical to her escape from abuse.

PART II . . . NOR ARE CHILDREN

Battering knows no age boundaries; girls can fall prey to it.

3 Kimberly 59

This woman entered her first abusive relationship at age twelve and her abusive marriage during her senior year of high school. Her story links abuse to obesity.

4 Jessica 73

This is the story of a high school homecoming queen who was battered most of her high school career by the school's star athlete.

PART III A TWO-TIMING BATTERER

Men batter the women in their lives differently. This section highlights that reality with the case of a man who concurrently battered his wife and his extramarital lover.

5 Rebecca 89

This Plains Indian woman was battered by her Euroamerican husband. With the divorce, she lost custody of her children.

6 Emily 105

This story captures the essence of the "southern belle" mentality where gendered relationships are concerned. This woman endured premarital, marital, and extramarital abuse.

PART IV FAMILY AND FRIENDS TO THE RESCUE

Battered women can be liberated by family and friends who support and do not blame them.

7 Lee 121

The wisdom and patience of this woman's parents freed her from her abusive, outlaw-militia husband.

8 Annette 135

This young Hispanic woman escaped her abuser with the help of her foster family.

PART V FACES OF SHELTER LIFE

Women's shelters are structured and work in different ways to assist escape.

9 Sharon 151

This is the story of a woman who decidedly broke the traditional edict of silence that shackles abused Black women. Her shelter experience is typical.

10 Gretchen 165

An underground shelter system protects this lesbian woman and her four children, who remain on the run from state to state from their abuser.

PART VI WHEN THE SYSTEM WORKS

Sociopolitical structures other than shelters, informal as well as formal, can help battered women leave.

11 Raquelle 183

This is the tale of a Mormon woman abused by a professional athlete. The case and its jury trial drew national media attention. Colorado's mandatory reporting and arrest laws helped liberate her from abuse.

12 Lucretia 197

This woman's life demonstrates the intersection of class, race, homosexuality, and abuse. A shelter, in conjunction with food stamps, welfare, and transitional housing programs, allowed her and her children to escape their abuser.

13 Colette 213

This woman's story includes devastating losses: a mother's suicide and a young daughter's death by accident. Her tiny community mobilized an informal network of donated services to help her leave her abuser.

PART VII LEGACIES OF LOSS AND DEATH

These are stories of women who escaped battering, but at significant personal expense or with great loss.

14 Blanca 233

This Puerto Rican-American woman relinquished custody of her children in order to escape her Vietnam veteran husband.

15 Judy 249

As a final gesture of control, the husband of this "preacher's kid" hanged himself where she was certain to discover his remains. She lives with that image of his death.

16 Freda 263

This is the story of a homeless African-American mother of five who contracted HIV from her abuser.
