

Contents

List of contributors	page vi
Acknowledgments	ix
1 Introduction: The social and interactional dimensions of human-computer interfaces, Peter J. Thomas	1
2 Ethnography and human-computer interaction, Geoff Cooper, Christine Hine, Janet Rachel, and Steve Woolgar	11
3 Toward foundational analysis in human-computer interaction, James M. Nyce and Jonas Löwgren	37
4 Representing the user: Notes on the disciplinary rhetoric of human-computer interaction, Geoff Cooper and John Bowers	48
5 Conceptions of the user in computer systems design, Philip E. Agre	67
6 On simulacrum of conversation: Toward a clarification of the relevance of conversation analysis for human-computer interaction, Graham Button and Wes Sharrock	107
7 Wizards and social control, Robin Wooffitt and Catriona MacDermid	126
8 Sociology, CSCW, and working with customers, Dave Randall and John A. Hughes	142
9 Expert systems versus systems for experts: Computer-aided dispatch as a support system in real-world environments, Jack Whalen	161
10 Conversation analysis and human-computer interaction design, Sarah A. Douglas	184
11 Multimedia tools for social and interactional data collection and analysis, Beverly L. Harrison	204
12 Social interaction in the use and design of a workstation: Two contexts of interaction, Deborah Lawrence, Michael E. Atwood, Shelly Dews, and Thea Turner	240
Index	261