

Contents

Introduction – Pulping Fictions: Consuming Culture Across the Literature/Media Divide	1
Imelda Whelehan and Deborah Cartmell
1 ‘Vanishing’ Worlds: Film Adaptation and the Mystery of the Original	11
John O. Thompson
2 The Vampire Writes Back: Anne Rice and the (Re)Turn of the Author in the Field of Cultural Production	29
Ken Gelder
3 Is s/he or Isn’t s/he?: Screening Orlando	43
Nicola Shaughnessy
4 Feminist Sympathies Versus Masculine Backlash: Kenneth Branagh’s Mary Shelley’s Frankenstein	57
Heidi Kaye
5 The Henry V Flashback: Kenneth Branagh’s Shakespeare	73
Deborah Cartmell
6 Consuming Middlemarch: The Construction and Consumption of Nostalgia in Stamford	85
Jenny Rice and Carol Saunders
7 Pleasure and Interpretation: Film Adaptations of Angela Carter’s Fiction	99
Catherine Neale
8 Capitalism Most Triumphant: Bill & Ted’s Excellent History Lesson	111
I.Q. Hunter

9	Robin Hood: Men in Tights: Fitting the Tradition Snugly	125
	Stephen Knight
10	Pulpmodernism: Tarantino's Affirmative Action	135
	Peter and Will Brooker
	Index	153