
CONTENTS

List of Figures	xiv
List of Tables	xv

Part I A Theory of Employment Systems

1. The Employment Relationship	3
Employment Systems	3
Incompleteness of the Employment Contract	8
Opportunism	11
Defining the 'Acceptable Set' of Tasks	13
Tacit Knowledge and Problems of Codification	13
Detailed Job Descriptions are not Economic	15
Work Measurement, in Practice, is Negotiation	16
Use of Classification Criteria to Assign Tasks to Jobs	16
The Function of Job Classification Systems	18
Use of Job Categories to Simplify Transactions	19
Articulation into Systems	21
Two Potential Objections to the Argument	21
Insights from the Historical Rise of the Employment Relationship	23
Conclusion	27
2. The Limits of Managerial Authority	31
Introduction	31
Transaction Rules and the Employment Relation	32
Efficiency: Competencies and Jobs	33
Enforceability: Transparency and the Control of Opportunism	36
The Exhaustiveness of the Classification	39
Examples of Each Type of Task Allocation Rule	41
Work Post	41
'Job Territory'/'Tools of the Trade'	42
Competence Rank	44

Qualification Rule	45
How each Rule Deals with Different Kinds of Opportunism	46
Job Boundaries and Work Allocation	47
Continuity of Employment	50
Unusual Tasks and Task Variability	51
The Recognition and Transmission of Skills	53
Conclusion	57
3. Diffusion and Predominance of Employment Rules	61
Introduction	61
Task Allocation Rules as Partial 'Evolutionarily Stable Strategies'	62
Predominance of Individual Transaction Rules	67
Greater Robustness	68
First-mover Difficulties for Innovators	70
Incompatibilities between the Rules	71
The Need for Inter-firm Institutions	72
Improving the Robustness of Transaction Rules	72
Power Balance and Policing Members' Actions	74
Greater Flexibility of Application	76
Renegotiation of Transaction Rules	80
Conclusion: Evolutionarily Stable Strategies and Labour Institutions	83
4. Classification Rules and the Consolidation of Employment Systems	86
Introduction	86
A Theory of Job Classification	87
A Simple Model	87
'Atomistic' and 'Holistic' Views of Job Classification	89
Incompleteness of Job Descriptions	91
Some Lessons from Occupational Classifications used in Earnings Statistics	92
Labour Market Conventions and Job Classifications	97
Multi-employer Job Classification Agreements	97
Familiarity and Convention	101
Some Comparative Evidence on Classifications and their Diffusion	103
Reinterpreting the ILO Evidence	104
Coverage of Classification Systems	105
The Role of Institutions in Diffusing Classification Rules	107
Employment Systems: Integrating Transaction Rules and Inter-firm Institutions	109

Part II Evidence and Personnel Management Implications

5. Societal Diversity of Employment Systems: Comparative Evidence	117
Some Evidence of Inter-country Differences in Employment Systems	117
Production Versus Training Approach: Key Indicators	119
Job Design	119
Skill Transferability and Occupational Markets	121
Internal Promotion and Internal Labour Markets	122
Treatment of Skills in Job and Pay Classifications	123
Wage Contours and Occupational and Internal Labour Markets	124
Task-oriented versus Function-oriented Approach: Key Indicators	128
Control Systems	128
Work-flow Rigidity	130
Functional Specialization of Work Roles	130
Hierarchical Segmentation	131
Patterns of Functional Flexibility	132
Diffusion of Main Employment Systems	133
The United States	133
Japan	137
Conclusion	139
6. Performance Management	148
Introduction	148
The Inherent Difficulties of Performance Measurement	150
Objective/Non-judgemental Criteria	150
Judgemental Criteria	151
Mutual Distrust and Performance Management	153
Some Conventionally Used Performance Criteria	154
How the Contractual Constraints Shape Performance Criteria	156
The Enforceability Constraint	157
The Efficiency Constraint	160
Moral Hazard, Transaction Rules and Performance Criteria	164
Employer Protections against Moral Hazard by Employees	164
Employee Protections against Employer Opportunism	166
Conclusion: Societal Influences on Performance Criteria	169

	Appendix 1 Some Examples of Criteria Used in Performance Appraisal	171
	Appendix 2 Transaction Rules and Performance Standards	173
7.	Pay and Incentives	177
	A Theory of Pay and Classifications	177
	The Price of Labour is a Rule not a Number	178
	Price and Job Classifications	182
	Price as a Rule and 'Rate for the Job'	184
	Rate for the Job and Opportunism	184
	Dealing with Contingencies: Why Pay Schedules are so Complex	187
	Dealing with Exceptions to 'Rate for the Job': the Example of Trainee Pay	188
	Rate-for-the-Job Classification and Pay for Performance	190
	Moral Hazard and Performance Pay	190
	Job Classification and Rewarding Performance at the Margin	193
	Hierarchical versus Occupational Classifications and Pay Structures	198
	Hierarchical and Occupational Pay Structures	199
	Pay Continuity Between the Blue- and White-Collar Hierarchies	203
	Pay for Organizational versus Occupational Skills	206
	Company Employment Practices and Pay Systems	206
	Conclusion	209
8.	Skills and Labour Market Structure	213
	Introduction	213
	Effects of the Production and Training Approaches on Labour Market Structure	214
	Approaches to Enforceability and Functional Flexibility	219
	Institutionalization of Transaction rules by OLMs and ILMs	221
	Institutional Foundations of Occupational Markets	222
	The of Role of Institutions When Employers Share Training Costs	223
	ILMs and their Institutional Supports	228
	Monopsony and Secondary Labour Markets	231
	Employment and Self-employment	233
	Some Quantitative Evidence on Alternatives to the Employment Relationship	233

Employment Systems and Market-mediated Employment	236
Movements between Employment Forms	238
Conclusions	242

Part III Conclusions

9. Employment Systems and the Theory of the Firm:
Societal Diversity	247
Introduction	247
Transaction Costs, Opportunism and Knowledge	249
Organizational Learning	250
Flexibility, Productivity and Skills	252
The Quality of Trust and Cooperation within the Firm	254
The Role of Inter-firm Institutions	257
The Benefits of Inter-firm Institutions	257
Consequences of Institutional Weakness	259
Function and Form of Labour Institutions	262
Models of Corporate Governance	266
Societal Diversity of Employment Systems	269
 References	274
Index	291

LIST OF FIGURES

1.1	Contracting over job tasks	9
1.2	Employer's choice between sales and employment contracts for tasks with uncertain demand	11
1.3	Grouping of tasks into three overlapping jobs	19
2.1	Training costs under the production and training approaches	35
2.2	Task assignment with task- and function-centred rules	39
3.1	Gains and costs of increasing specification of tasks	63
3.2	Net gains from increasing specification or diffuseness of employment obligations	64
3.3	Employment transaction rules as an ESS	65
4.1	A model of job and pay classification	88
4.2	The impact of different classificatory principles on pay classifications	93
4.3	Eyraud-Rozenblatt model of classification agreements	104
5.1	Impact of pay contours between firms on industry wage levels	124
6.1	Job demands, effort and performance	160
7.1	The structure of hourly labour costs 1992/4 (industry and construction)	179
7.2	An illustration of how classificatory principles determine pay	183
7.3	Moral hazard and performance incentives	191
7.4	Pay dispersions 1979-90	202
8.1	The transition between open-market and employment contracts	236
9.1	Transition paths from job-based to skill-based work systems	262

LIST OF TABLES

2.1	The contractual constraints and common employment rules	33
2.2	Summary of how the rules cope with different types of opportunism	56
4.1	Union density and collective bargaining coverage rates 1970-90	106
5.1	Dominant employment rules by country	118
5.2	Impact of skill contours between firms on industry wage levels	125
5.3	Length of service and earnings in France, Germany and the UK	126
5.4	Growth in earnings attributable to tenure by firm size	127
5.5	Variations in the nature of OJT	132
5.6	Prevalence of bureaucratic personnel procedures in the US, 1935-46	134
5.7	Extent of formal work control systems in US organizations, 1991	135
5.8	Internal labour market items in FILM scale, US 1991	136
5.9	Relative diffusion of the competence ranking system in Japan 1958-74	138
5.10	Diffusion of internal job mobility and broad-based skills: Japan 1979	138
5.11	Incidence of the production and training approaches	140-3
5.12	Incidence of the task- and function-centred rules	144-6
6.1	Dominant performance criteria dictated by the two contractual constraints	163
6.2	Work quality: a summary of employee defences against opportunism	168
6.3	Individual assessment matrix in a Japanese steel firm (Sumitomo Metal Industries)	173
6.4	Transaction rules and job performance standards	174
7.1	Overview of the size of occupational pay differentials by country	200
7.2	Monthly earnings by occupation, 1978 and 1986	201
7.3	Production versus the training approaches: continuous versus discontinuous job and pay hierarchies	204
7.4	Skilled blue-collar and supervisory occupations in the US	205
7.5	Pay for skills and length of service	206

7.6	Pay systems and flexibility management	208
8.1	Effect of contractual constraints on labour market structure	221
8.2	Distribution of non-agricultural self-employed by occupation 1988/90, and trends 1973-90 (%)	234
8.3	Non-standard employment forms in Europe 1995	235
8.4	Temporary workers by occupation and type of temporary work, Great Britain, Spring 1996	235
9.1	Effects of the contractual constraints on human resource systems	256