

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
List of Abbreviations	viii
1 Introduction	1
1.1 General introduction	1
1.2 Integration into the research context	3
1.3 Chapter guide	9
2 Methods of research	12
2.1 Attitude surveys and opinion polls	12
2.2 Discourse analysis	13
2.3 The interviews	13
2.4 'Racial matching' - an obstacle to validity?	17
3 The European context	21
3.1 General Community policies on immigration - Fortress Europe?	21
3.2 The Treaty on European Union (Maastricht Treaty)	25
3.3 The European Parliament	27
3.4 EU-provisions for third country nationals- a summarizing commentary	28
4 Racism	33
4.1 History and modernity - general remarks on the roots of racism	33
4.2 Historical and theoretical groundings of terminology	36
4.3 Europe, the European Union and Racism	43
4.4 State, national identity and citizenship - a brief contextualization	48
5 National identity and exclusion	52
5.1 Some theoretical remarks on the formation of nation-states and national identity	52
5.2 Identity as 'nation' and as 'race': the individual cases of Britain and Germany	55
5.3 The context of the post-war period	62
5.4 Post-national and post-conventional identity	68
5.5 Concluding remarks	71

6	Citizenship	75
6.1	Nationality and citizenship - brief definitional remarks	75
6.2	Relevant theories on citizenship	76
6.3	Citizenship as a legal device - a historical perspective	80
6.4	Formal citizenship in the context of post-war labour migration	85
6.5	Substantive citizenship in the context of post-war labour migration	90
6.6	European citizenship	99
6.7	Concluding remarks	107
7	Mass discourse	114
7.1	Social attitudes surveys and polls in the British context	115
7.2	German opinion surveys	119
7.3	Commentary	125
7.4	Surveys on national identity	127
7.5	Concluding remarks	128
8	Parliamentary debates on ethnic or 'racial' issues	134
8.1	Some general remarks on the debates	135
8.2	The German debates	136
8.3	The British debates	144
8.4	The European level	151
8.5	Concluding remarks	153
9	The Interviews	156
9.1	Racism	157
9.2.	National identity and nationalism	175
9.3	Citizenship	198
9.4	Citizenship as a mechanism for inclusion - the nature of the interviewed organizations and their demands: concluding remarks	220
10	Conclusion	226
10.1	Citizenship in Germany and Britain: a comparison	227
10.2	European identity and citizenship	229
10.3	Future prospects of citizenship	229
Appendices
I	Statistics on foreign residents by nationality	233
II	EU-drafted documents	234
III	The interviewed organizations: their functions and objectives	236
IV	The interview questions	243
Bibliography		251