

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Part I: THE LEGACY OF CENTRAL PLANNING AND TRANSITION ISSUES IN HOUSING	1
I. INTRODUCTION	1
II. CENTRALLY PLANNED ECONOMIES AND THEIR HOUSING SYSTEMS	3
A. Central Planning: Theory and Reality	3
B. Gradual or Radical Reform: A Look at Previous Reform Attempts	4
C. Critical Differences Between Socialist Economies and Market-Based Housing Systems	6
III. CHARACTERISTICS OF HOUSING AS AN ECONOMIC GOOD IN A MARKET ECONOMY	9
A. Housing is an Unusually Complex Economic Good	9
B. Durability	10
C. Heterogeneity	13
D. Spatial Fixity	14
E. Government Involvement	15
F. Consequences of Housing's Characteristics For the National Economy	17
IV. MAJOR CONSIDERATIONS IN THE TRANSITION TOWARD A MARKET HOUSING SYSTEM	20
A. Structure of Household Incomes and Scope of the Reforms	20
B. Property Rights and Privatization	22
C. Price Distortions	22
D. Lack of Financial Mechanisms	23
E. Inefficient Building Industry Organization	24
F. Rigid Urban Planning System	27
G. Contracting, Stagnant, or Growing National Economy?	27
 PART II: FRAMEWORK FOR HOUSING REFORM IN SOCIALIST ECONOMIES	 29
I. HOUSING AS A MAJOR COMPONENT OF ECONOMIC REFORM	29
A. Macroeconomic Stabilization and Housing Reform	30
B. Structural Aspects of Socialist Economies Affecting the Housing Transition	33
C. Diversity of Housing Conditions Among Socialist Economies	36
II. CLARIFICATION OF PROPERTY RIGHTS AND PRIVATIZATION	39
A. Clarification of Private and Public Property Rights: Main Issues	39
B. Tenure Types, Property Rights, and Outcomes	41
C. Privatization	45
III. RENTS, PRICES, AND SUBSIDIES	46
A. Managing the Existing Stock: Rent Reform and New Tenure Rights	46
B. Rent Reforms and Utility Pricing Reforms	48
C. Reduction and Social Targeting of Subsidies	49
D. Efficiency Goals, Stability, and Middle-Income Groups	49

IV. HOUSING FINANCE	50
A. The Main Problems	50
B. A Proper Approach to Housing Finance	51
V. REFORM OF HOUSING PRODUCTION	52
A. Diversification of the Housing Industry and Competition	52
B. Reform of the Urban Planning System	54
C. Role of Local Governments	54
PART III: INITIAL STEPS FOR HOUSING REFORM	56
I. WHAT IS TO BE DONE?	56
II. PROPERTY RIGHTS REFORMS	57
III. FISCAL AND FINANCIAL REFORMS	57
IV. PRODUCTION REFORMS	58

FIGURES

Figure 1 Diversity of Choices in Malaysia and Standardization of Urban Housing in Socialist China (1989)	19
Figure 2 Structure of Labor Income in Socialist Economies	21
Figure 3 The Building Industry in Eastern Europe and Western Europe	25
Figure 4 Hungary: Changing Building Industry	26

TABLES

Table 1 Diversity Among Socialist Economies	37
Table 2 Growth Rates in European Socialist Economies, 1981-1990	40
Table 3 Ownership of the Housing Stock in Socialist Countries and Cost Recovery from Households	42

ANNEXES

Annex 1 Reform Framework for the Existing Housing Stock: Strategic Areas for Better Management	59
Annex 2 Reform Framework for the Production of New Housing: Strategic Areas for Flexibility and Diversity	60