

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	ix
X ONE EVERYDAY EXPERIENCES OF MASS CONSUMPTION	1
TWO MASS CONSUMPTION AND CONSUMER CULTURE	7
X Mass consumption: The classic inheritance from Marx and Simmel	8
Critiques of Marx: Cultural anthropology and mass consumption	10
Theories of consumption	12
Mass consumption and personal identity	24
THREE SAVING AND BORROWING	26
Everyday finances	26
Developments in consumer credit, debt and saving	27
Responses to consumer pressures	29
Who is in debt and who saves?	33
Explaining personal debt	36
Explaining saving	47
Is saving the opposite of borrowing?	53
Conclusions	57
FOUR THE MEANING OF POSSESSIONS	59
Ownership of domestic and personal goods	60
The meanings of personal and domestic objects	64
Relations between people and objects	67
Material goods and cultural meanings	84

FIVE SHOPPING, SPENDING AND PLEASURE	86
The meaning of shopping	86
Consumer research: The shopper as decision maker	87
Criticisms of consumer research	88
Shoppers' involvement, motivation and consumption style	89
Shopping as a gendered activity	94
The supermarket	96
Shopping in cultural context	98
SIX GENERATIONAL AND LIFE COURSE INFLUENCES ON ECONOMIC BELIEFS	101
Understanding social change	101
Generations and the life course	105
Parents and children	121
The belief in progress	124
SEVEN EVERYDAY ACCOUNTING FOR MASS CONSUMPTION	133
Beliefs, accounts and representations	133
Everyday beliefs and assumptions in personal biographies	135
Discourses on consumer society	144
Drawing the line between luxury and necessity	150
Understanding why people get into debt	158
Learning from life	161
EIGHT CONCLUSIONS	166
Appendix	172
Notes	187
References	191
Index	199