
Contents

List of tables	ix
List of figures	xi
List of contributors	xii
Introduction	1
Antoine Bailly and William Lever
Agglomeration and diffusion	1
Towards flexible production systems	2
Vertical and horizontal logics	3
The organization of the book
PART I	11
1 Economic restructuring: A conceptual framework	13
William Coffey and Antoine Bailly
Introduction	13
Functional restructuring	15
Spatial restructuring	24
Innovative milieux: Firm-territory partnerships	31
Conclusion	35
2 Economic restructuring in Western Europe	40
Guy Burgel and William Lever
Introduction	40
The contradictions of the present day	42
Urban society: The local and the universal	48
The stakes for the future	52
The mobility of population: Fundamental trends for the Western countries	54
Economic change and spatial restructuring	55
Economic accumulation or social equilibrium	58
3 Economic restructuring in Southern Europe	63
Rossetos Fakiolas
Introduction	63
The political and administrative characteristics	66
Regional differences and recent economic developments	70

Institutional and structural rigidities	73
The structure of employment and output	77
Restructuring through foreign investment	80
Labour market rigidities and mass immigration	85
4 Economic restructuring in Eastern Europe	92
Paul Hare
Introduction	92
Structural change in the early years of transition	95
Industrial competitiveness	99
Longer-term structural change	105
Conclusion	111
5 Economic restructuring in eastern Germany	120
Ludwig Schätzl
Introduction	120
The state of the economy of the GDR before German unification	121
Fundamental decisions taken in the transformation of the system	123
Empirical findings on the process of economic adjustment after German unification	128
Scenarios for future economic and regional development	135
PART II	143
6 European world cities	145
Arie Shachar
Introduction	145
The evolution of the world city concept	146
World cities' characteristics	149
The European urban system	153
European world cities as financial centres	161
Conclusion	174
7 The European regional dimension	178
William Lever
Introduction	178
The new regionalism	180
Convergence or divergence	186
Macro-economic theories of winners and losers in the European urban-regional system	193

Corporate control, high-technology and industrial districts	196
Conclusion	200
8 The urban development cycle and the economic system	204
William Lever and Anthony Champion
Introduction	204
Concentration and deconcentration	206
New production systems and employment deconcentration	208
Reconcentration and economic change	214
Recentralization and economic change	217
Intra-urban shifts and economic change	221
Conclusion	224
9 Divisions of labour, production and space: Classical concepts for the new Europe?	228
Joan-Eugeni Sánchez, Eric Weiss-Altaner and Antoine Bailly
The classical economists and the division of labour	228
Divisions of labour and socio-spatial hierarchies	233
Towards new forms of the division of labour and the division of production	239
Divisions of labour and reconsideration of the concept of the region	241
PART III	249
10 A theoretical framework for analysis of urban economic policy	251
Chris Jensen-Butler
Introduction	251
Urban economic policy: Theory	254
Equity	257
Efficiency	262
Environmental control	279
Budget constraints	282
A typology of urban economic policy	283
Urban economic policy: Conflicts and their resolution	287
Conclusion	288
11 The administrative structure of the delivery mechanisms	294
Joan-Eugeni Sánchez
Introduction	294

The technical and economic dimensions of restructuring	295
Technical innovation and territory	299
Linkages between socio-spatial effects	303
Agents acting in the framework of territorial power relations	305
Functional scales within the state: The regional and the local	310
Agents and metropolitan space	314
12 Urban and regional policy: The political dimension	323
Chris Pickvance
Introduction	323
The scope for the political dimension in urban and regional policy	325
Political forces and urban and regional policy	335
Local government economic development policy	341
Conclusion	345
Conclusion	348
Antoine Bailly and William Lever
Index	353

List of tables

2.1	Attachment of populations to different levels of social space	49
2.2	Growth of commuting mobility in Île-de-France and France	54
2.3	Economic trends in three départements around Paris, 1983–1991	57
3.1	Comparison of hourly labour costs, 1991	86
4.1	GDP and industrial output in Hungary, Poland and Russia	98
4.2	Competitiveness results: Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and the Soviet Union	106
4.3	Results of the Industrial Projections Model: Hungary	110
	(a) Base case	111
	(b) Slow reform	112
	(c) Accelerated reform	112
4.4	Results of the Industrial Projections Model: Poland	113
	(a) Base case	114
	(b) Slow reform	114
	(c) Accelerated reform	115
4.5	Results of the Industrial Projections Model: Russia	116
	(a) Base case	117
	(b) Slow reform	117
	(c) Accelerated reform	118
5.1	Comparison between the indicators of the level of socio-economic development in the GDR and FRG in 1989	122
5.2	Chronological table of the collapse of the GDR	124
5.3	GDP of the Länder in Germany, 1991	129
5.4	Development of the labour market in eastern Germany (in millions)	130
5.5	The development of gainful employment in eastern Germany by economic sector	130
5.6	Investment expenditure in eastern Germany (in DMbn)	132
5.7	Contributions from west German public budgets to eastern Germany	133
6.1	Financial sector share of total GDP (%)	169
7.1	European macro-regions	187

7.2	Predicted change in macro-regions	188
7.3	The poorest and wealthiest regions in the EC	190
7.4	Trends in regional inequalities	192
8.1	Employment change by urban size, 1959–1975	209
8.2	Employment change by urban size, 1980–1984	210
8.3	Good and poor economic performers: Germany, 1970–1980	210
8.4	Hypothetical estimates of the proportion of factories experiencing constrained locations	211
8.5	National trends in urbanization and counter-urbanization in the 1980s	215
8.6	Economic activity in major European cities, 1989–1996	218
8.7	Economic indicators: 32 cities	219
8.8	The phases of urban development	222
11.1	Matrix of effects and conditions	304
11.2	Concepts and situations of intervention	317
12.1	Changing definitions of the inner-city problem and inner-city policy	327

List of figures

2.1	Demographic trends of the French urban network, 1962–1990	44
2.2	Demographic trends of the French départements , 1962–1990	45
5.1	Development centres in eastern Germany	140
7.1	Growth zones in Europe	182
7.2	The new regional planning zones of Europe	184
7.3	Pattern of regional incomes in Europe	189
10.1	Three-dimensional policy space	258
10.2	Isoquants and capital subsidies	260
10.3	Social and private marginal costs	264
10.4	Abatement and pollution damage costs	281
10.5	Trade-off curves between efficiency and equity goals	288
10.6	Three-dimensional trade-off between three policy goals, together with decision-makers' preference surface	289
11.1	The sequence of socio-territorial effects	305