

SOCIAL SCIENCE

in question

Contents

Preface	vii
Chapter 1 Social Science as a Situated Practice	1
Chapter 2 The Story of Science	25
Chapter 3 The Emergence of the Social Sciences	73
Chapter 4 Imagination and Complexity in the Social Sciences	127
Chapter 5 Paradigms, Conventions and Relativism	181
Chapter 6 Language, Discourse and Culture: Rethinking Representation in the Social Sciences	229
Chapter 7 Situated Knowledges: Rethinking Knowledge and Reality	277
References	331
Acknowledgements	337
Glossary of key words	339
Index	354

Mark J Smith

Contents

1	Introduction	3
2	Facing the challenges in the social sciences	5
2.1	The challenge of change	5
2.2	The challenge of methods	6
2.3	The challenge of terminology	8
2.4	Thinking through the challenges	11
3	What does it mean to practise social science?	12
3.1	What does it mean for knowledge to be situated?	12
4	Connecting the social sciences to everyday life	15
4.1	The perspective of the stranger	16
Reading A
	Owning and renting houses Peter Saunders	21
Reading B
	The homeless woman: a documentary photograph Jacky Chapman	21
Reading C
	The homeless Jean Conway	22
Reading D
	The meaning of home Annabel Tomas and Helga Dittmar	23

Contents

1	Introduction	27
1.1	Science as authentic knowledge	28
1.2	Science and the circuit of knowledge	32
2	Representing science	33
2.1	Science and its metaphors	34
2.2	Closed systems and open systems	41
3	Science and modernity	46
3.1	Science, observation and experimentation	47
3.2	The historical context of the Enlightenment	55
3.3	The Enlightenment, progress and social science	58
4	Conclusion: questions from the Enlightenment	64
Reading A
	The development of emotions: using experimental methods
	Keith Oatley and Jennifer M. Jenkins	66
Reading B
	The Encyclopédie
	Michael Bartholomew, Stephanie Clennell and Linda Walsh	69
Reading C
	What is the Enlightenment?
	Robert Hollinger	71

Contents

1	Introduction	75
1.1	Defining positivism	77
2	Positivism and the foundations of the social sciences	78
2.1	Comte and the positivist philosophy	78
2.2	Positivism, utilitarianism and human happiness	82
2.3	Durkheim and the positivist science	83
3	The normal and the pathological: positivism in practice	85
3.1	Science and 'race'	86
3.2	Science and crime	92
4	Positivism, language and science	97
4.1	The logical positivist approach	97
4.2	Practical implications of logical positivism	101
4.3	The standard positivist approach	102
4.4	Practical implications of standard positivism	104
5	From the problem of induction to the falsificationist alternative	105
5.1	Situating Popper	106
5.2	Conjectures and refutations: Popper's falsificationist solution	107
6	Positivist and empiricist approaches on the economy	112
7	Conclusion: the common foundations of empiricism	116
	Reading A
	The positive philosophy and scientific laws Auguste Comte	119
	Reading B
	The principle of utility Jeremy Bentham	120
	Reading C
	Samuel George Morton – empiricist of polygeny Stephen Jay Gould	121
	Reading D
	The intelligence of American negroes Hans Eysenck	123
	Reading E
	The young delinquent Cyril Burt	124
	Reading F
	The professional stranger Eileen Barker	126

Contents

1	Introduction	129
2	The conceptual organization of experience: Kant's legacy	133
3	Understanding complexity	140
3.1	The emergence of neo-Kantianism	141
3.2	Facts, values and relevance in social science	144
3.3	Using ideal types	146
	Geographical Models 1	151
4	Rational choices and human action	155
4.1	Game theory	156
4.2	Problems in rational choice theory	158
5	Meaning and subjectivity	161
5.1	The self-concept and social interaction	162
5.2	Phenomenology and intersubjective meaning	164
5.3	Ethnomethodology and tacit knowledge	165
	Geographical Models 2	167
6	Conclusion: taking imagination seriously	171
Reading A
	There is more to seeing than meets the eye Norwood Hanson	174
Reading B
	Race relations in the city John Rex and Robert Moore	175
Reading C
	The tragedy of the commons Garrett Hardin	177
Reading D
	When rationality fails Jon Elster	178
Reading E
	Normal rubbish: deviant patients in casualty departments Roger Jeffery	179

Contents

1	Introduction	183
2	Falsificationist escape clauses	185
2.1	Interpretation and observation in the natural sciences	185
2.2	Escaping refutation in the social sciences	188
3	Paradigms and conventions: the end of progress?	193
3.1	Kuhn's account of scientific change	193
3.2	Paradigms in the social sciences	198
3.3	Conventionalism beyond Kuhn 1: question everything!	204
3.4	Conventionalism beyond Kuhn 2: the sociology of knowledge and science	208
4	Rationality and relativism: keeping progress	214
5	Reassessing rationality and relativism: towards a conclusion	217
Reading A
	The emotionally disturbed child as the family scapegoat Ezra F. Vogel and Norman W. Bell	219
Reading B Three social psychologies
	Experimental social psychology Patrick McGhee	220
	Humanistic and experiential social psychology Richard Stevens	221
	Critical social psychology Margaret Wetherell	221
Reading C Theorizing the economy
	Economic paradigms Howard R. Vane and John L. Thompson	222
	Economic crisis: the Marxist view E.K. Hunt and Howard J. Sherman	223
Reading D
	Methodological pluralism Bruce Caldwell	224
Reading E
	Two sociological perspectives on science Michael Mulkay	225
Reading F Bending the rules
	Faking it to make it John Turney	225
	What if teacher is a cheat? Stuart Sutherland	226
Reading G
	The schizophrenia research programme Mary Boyle	227

Contents

1	Introduction	231
2	Defining language: structure and meaning	234
2.1	Language and structure	234
2.2	Language and cultural representation	240
3	Language and discourse	246
3.1	Discourse and analysis in social psychology	247
3.2	Post-structuralism and discourse	252
4	Understanding culture	260
4.1	Culture as a way of life	264
4.2	Culture as a contested space	266
5	No conclusions, just some pointers	271
Reading A
	The uses of community Jonathan Potter and Margaret Wetherell	272
Reading B
	Representation and discourse Stuart Hall	273
Reading C
	Political discourse: homosexuality and its metaphors Anna Marie Smith	274
Reading D
	Contested places, contested boundaries Doreen Massey	275

Contents

1 Introduction	279
1.1 Rethinking the challenges in the social sciences	280
2 Situating knowledge construction: postmodernism, genealogy and realism	281
2.1 Lyotard's report on knowledge	283
2.2 Using genealogy	288
2.3 Reinventing 'reality'	297
2.4 Thinking through knowledge construction	307
3 Situated knowledge: gender and science	311
3.1 Gender and empiricism	313
3.2 Gender and reality	314
3.3 Gender and representation	316
3.4 Reconsidering gender and science	318
4 By way of a conclusion: journey's end?	320
Reading A
Postmodern language games Madan Sarup	323
Reading B
The construction of homosexuality Jeffrey Weeks	324
Reading C
Abstractions, structures and mechanisms Andrew Sayer	326
Reading D
Challenging orthodoxies: gender, ethnicity and social science Marcia Rice	329