List of Figures and Tables vii

Notes on Contributors ix

1 Introduction: The Emergence of Critical Perspectives on Consulting 1
Robin Fincham and Timothy Clark

Part I Setting the Scene: The Nature of Management Consultancy and Management Advice

2 Consulting: What Should it Mean? 21
Edgar H. Schein

3 Trapped in Their Wave: The Evolution of Management Consultancies 28
Matthias Kipping

4 The Rise of Consultancy and the Prospect for Regions 50
Peter Wood

5 On Knowledge, Business Consultants and the Selling of Total Quality Management 74
Karen Legge

Part II The Contexts of Management Consultancy and Management Advice

6 Virtual Stories of Virtual Working: Critical Reflections on CTI Consultancy Discourse 93
Peter Case

7 The Vision Thing: Constructing Technology and the Future in Management Advice 115
Brian P. Bloomfield and Theo Vurdubakis

8 Front-line Diffusion: The Production and Negotiation of Knowledge Through Training Interactions 130
Andrew Sturdy

9 Knowledge Legitimation and Audience Affiliation Through Storytelling: The Example of Management Gurus 152
Timothy Clark and David Greatbatch

10 A Fantasy Theme Analysis of Three Guru-led Management Fashions 172
Brad Jackson

Part III Critical Reflections on Management Consultancy and Management Advice

11 Charisma Versus Technique: Differentiating the Expertise of Management Gurus and Management Consultants 191
Robin Fincham

12 On Communication Barriers Between Management Science, Consultancies and Business Organizations 206
Alfred Kieser

13 Professionalism and Politics in Management Consultancy Work 228
Mats Alvesson and Anders W. Johansson

14 Understanding Advice: Towards a Sociology of Management Consultancy 247
Graeme Salaman

15 What Next? More Critique of Consultants, Gurus and Managers 260
Frank Heller

Index 273

• LIST OF FIGURES AND TABLES •

Figures

4.1	Dominant scales of demand for consultancy expertise and patterns of supply response	65
11.1	Process redesign model	199

Tables

3.1	Growth of the Bedaux Consultancy, 1918–1931	31
3.2	The expansion of McKinsey, 1975–2000	34
3.3	Change in the top ten worldwide consultancies, 1998 vs. 1991	37
3.4	The different waves in the evolution of the consulting industry	38
3.5	Characteristics of the consultancies in different waves	44
4.1	Top ten UK management consultancies: 1999 fee income (£m), IT share and top four markets served	55
4.2	Reasons for using consultancies on corporate change projects	58
4.3	Patterns of consultancy use in relation to in-house experience	58
4.4	Types of consultancy used	60
4.5	Small management consultancies in Inner London, the Outer South East and North West England, 1991	62
10.1	The key rhetorical elements of three major management fashions that emerged during the 1990s	180
11.1	Charisma versus technique	194
11.2	Guru and consultant expertise	201

13.1 Varieties in types of consultants and clients in management consultancy work 234

15.1 Four aspects of an epistemological interaction system 262

15.2 A preliminary list of people who influence consultants and/or managers 264

15.3 A range of managerial motives for seeking and accepting consultant-guru help 267