

CONTENTS

PREFACE xxi

Part 1 STUDYING CONSUMER BEHAVIOR 1

Chapter 1 INTRODUCTION 3

- Defining Consumer Behavior 5
 - Customers and Consumers 5
 - The Ultimate Consumer 5
 - The Individual Buyer 6
 - The Decision Process 7
 - A Subset of Human Behavior 8
- Why Study Consumer Behavior? 8
 - Significance in Daily Lives 8
 - Application to Decision Making 8
- Applying Consumer Behavior Knowledge 9
 - Consumer Behavior and Marketing Management 9
 - Consumer Behavior and Nonprofit and Social Marketing 16
 - Consumer Behavior and Governmental Decision Making 17
 - Consumer Behavior and Demarketing 18
 - Consumer Behavior and Consumer Education 19
- Studying Consumer Behavior 20
 - Modeling Behavior 21
- Summary 26
- Managerial Reflections 26
- Discussion Topics 27
- Projects 27

Chapter 2 UNDERSTANDING CONSUMERS AND MARKET SEGMENTS 29

- Views of the Market and Alternative Marketing Strategies 30
 - Market Aggregation 30
 - Market Segmentation 30
- Demographic Characteristics and Market Segmentation 35
 - U.S. Population Growth 35

The Changing Age Mix of the U.S. Population	37
Regional Distribution of the U.S. Population	39
Metropolitan Population in the United States	44
Nonmetropolitan Population in the United States	45
Geographic Mobility of the U.S. Population	46
Geodemographic Clustering of Markets	47
Education	51
Occupation	52
Income	52
Limitations of Demographics in Predicting Consumer Behavior	59
Lifestyle and Psychographic Segmentation	60
The Technique of Lifestyle Segmentation	61
Application of Lifestyle Segmentation	62
Usage Segmentation	64
Volume Segmentation	64
Brand-User Segmentation	66
Product-User Segmentation	67
Loyalty Segmentation	68
Situation Segmentation	68
Benefit Segmentation	70
The Technique of Benefit Segmentation	70
Application of Benefit Segmentation	71
Analysis of Consumer Problems	72
Product Positioning	73
The Interrelationship of Market Segmentation and Product Positioning	73
Strategies to Position Products	73
Positioning Analysis	75
The Future of Segmentation and Positioning	77
Summary	77
Managerial Reflections	78
Discussion Topics	79
Projects	79

Part II

ENVIRONMENTAL INFLUENCES ON CONSUMER BEHAVIOR 81

Chapter 3

CULTURE 83

Culture Defined	84
Cultural Relevance to Marketing Decisions	85
The Characteristics of Culture	86
Culture Is Invented	87
Culture Is Learned	87
Culture Is Socially Shared	87
Cultures Are Similar But Different	87
Culture Is Gratifying and Persistent	87
Culture Is Adaptive	88
Culture Is Organized and Integrated	88
Culture Is Prescriptive	88

Cultural Values	88
U.S. Cultural Values	89
Do Values Influence Consumer Behavior?	98
Cultural Change and Countercultures	108
Changing Cultural Values in the United States	108
Implications of Cultural Change for the Marketer	108
Tracking Cultural Change	112
Cross-Cultural Understanding of Consumer Behavior	113
The Need for Cross-Cultural Understanding	113
Decision Areas for the International Marketer	117
Summary	124
Managerial Reflections	125
Discussion Topics	125
Projects	125

Chapter 4 SUBCULTURES 127

The Nature of Subculture	128
The Black Subculture	130
Demographic Characteristics	130
Psychographic Characteristics	132
Consumer Behavior and Marketing Implications	132
The Asian Subculture	137
Demographic Characteristics	137
Psychographic Characteristics	138
Consumer Behavior and Marketing Implications	139
The Hispanic Subculture	140
Demographic Characteristics	140
Psychographic Characteristics	141
Consumer Behavior and Marketing Implications	143
The Youth Subculture	149
Demographic Characteristics	149
Psychographic Characteristics	150
Consumer Behavior and Marketing Implications	151
The Older Subculture	155
Demographic Characteristics	156
Psychographic Characteristics	158
Consumer Behavior and Marketing Implications	159
Summary	165
Managerial Reflections	165
Discussion Topics	165
Projects	166

Chapter 5 SOCIAL CLASS 167

The Process of Social Stratification	168
The Nature of Social Class	168
Social Classes Exhibit Status	168

Social Classes Are Multidimensional	171
Social Classes Are Hierarchical	171
Social Classes Restrict Behavior	171
Social Classes Are Homogeneous	172
Social Classes Are Dynamic	172
Social-Class Measurement and Categorization	173
The Subjective Method	173
The Reputational Method	173
The Objective Method	173
Problems in Social-Class Measurement	175
Social-Class Lifestyles	176
Upper Americans	177
Middle Americans	179
Lower Americans	180
The Role of Social Class in Segmenting Markets	181
Social Class and Income Related to Lifestyle Patterns	182
Social Class and Income Related to Consumer Behavior Patterns	182
Social Class and Consumer Behavior	185
Products and Services Consumed	185
Shopping Behavior	188
Promotional Response Patterns	191
Price-Related Behavior	193
Are Class Differences Disappearing?	193
Summary	194
Managerial Reflections	194
Discussion Topics	195
Projects	195
Chapter 6
SOCIAL GROUPS	197
What is a Group?	198
Classification of Groups	198
Content or Function	198
Degree of Personal Involvement	198
Degree of Organization	199
Group Properties	200
Status	200
Norms	200
Role	201
Socialization	202
Power	202
Reference Groups	205
Types of Reference Groups	205
Reasons for Accepting Reference-Group Influence	205
The Nature of Reference-Group Influence	208
The Variability of Reference-Group Influence	211
Variability Among Products	211
Variability Among Groups	215
Variability Among Individuals	216

Variability by Type of Influence 216

Variability by Situation 217

Which Reference Group Dominates? 217

Summary 218

Managerial Reflections 218

Discussion Topics 218

Projects 219

Chapter 7

FAMILY 221

Significance of the Family in Consumer Behavior 222

Families and Households 223

Family Life Cycle 223

Traditional Life-Cycle Stages 223

A Modernized Family Life Cycle 227

Relationship Between Family Life Cycle and Consumer Behavior 228

Life Cycle Versus Age in Segmenting Markets 231

Beyond the Life Cycle: Intergenerational Influences 231

Family Purchasing Decisions 231

Role Structure 234

Power Structure 236

Stage in the Family Purchase-Decision Process 242

Family-Specific Characteristics 243

Marketing Implications of Family Purchasing Decisions 245

The Changing American Family 246

Changing Female Roles 247

Changing Male Roles 253

Growth of the Singles Market 256

Summary 259

Managerial Reflections 259

Discussion Topics 259

Projects 260

Chapter 8

PERSONAL INFLUENCE AND DIFFUSION OF INNOVATIONS 261

The Nature and Significance of Personal Influence 262

Communication and Influence Flow 264

Opinion Leadership in Marketing 266

Who Are Opinion Leaders? 266

Why Opinion Leaders Attempt to Influence Others 268

Why Followers Accept Personal Influence 269

The Market Maven 270

Adoption and Diffusion of Innovations 271

What Is an Innovation? 271

The Adoption Process 272

The Diffusion Process 273

Marketing Implications of Personal Influence	283
Identifying and Using Opinion Leaders Directly	283
Creating Opinion Leaders	286
Simulating Opinion Leadership	286
Stimulating Opinion Leadership	289
Stifling Opinion Leadership	290
Summary	292
Managerial Reflections	292
Discussion Topics	293
Projects	293

Part III

INDIVIDUAL DETERMINANTS OF CONSUMER BEHAVIOR 295

Chapter 9

PERSONALITY AND SELF-CONCEPT 297

Personality Theories and Applications	298
Measuring Personality	299
Some Major Personality Theories	301
A Critical Review	307
Psychographics	308
Personality and Marketing: A Summary	309
Self-Concept	309
How the Self-Concept Develops	310
Consistency of the Self	312
Self-Concept and Consumer Behavior	312
Summary	318
Managerial Reflections	319
Discussion Topics	319
Projects	320

Chapter 10

MOTIVATION AND INVOLVEMENT 321

The Nature and Role of Motives	322
The Nature of Motives	322
The Role of Motives	323
Classifying Motives	325
Simplified Schemes	325
A Comprehensive Scheme	326
Motive Arousal	328
Triggering Arousal	328
Optimal Stimulation and Arousal	330
Effects of Arousal	332
Utilitarian and Hedonic Expressions of Motives	333
Motive Structuring	334
Motive Hierarchy	344

Motive Combinations 336

Self-Concept 339

Motivation Research 339

Involvement 340

Dimensions of Involvement 341

Marketing Implications 346

Summary 347

Managerial Reflections 348

Discussion Topics 348

Projects 349

Chapter 11
INFORMATION PROCESSING 351

Overview 352

Information Acquisition 355

Active Search 355

Passive Reception 356

Sensation 357

Attention 359

Perceptual Encoding 365

Stages in the Encoding Process 365

Influences on Encoding 367

Information Load 371

Marketing Implications 372

Product Factors 372

Price Considerations 374

Company and Store Image 376

Advertising Issues 377

Summary 381

Managerial Reflections 382

Discussion Topics 382

Projects 383

Chapter 12
LEARNING AND MEMORY 385

Characterizing Learning 386

Learning Defined 386

Types of Learned Behavior 387

Principal Elements of Learning 388

Classifying Learning 389

Learning Connections 389

Cognitive Interpretations 392

Applying Alternative Learning Concepts to Consumer Behavior 393

Additional Consumer Learning Topics 395

The Behavior Modification Perspective 395

Stimulus Generalization 399

Rate and Degree of Learning 400

Extinction 402

Forgetting 402

Memory 404

Characteristics of Memory Systems 404

Retrieval of Information 412

Advertising Applications 414

Summary 418Managerial Reflections 418*Discussion Topics 419*Projects 420*Chapter 13*ATTITUDES 421*Definitions of Attitude 422*Characteristics of Attitudes 423

Attitudes Have an Object 423

Attitudes Have Direction, Degree, and Intensity 424

Attitudes Have Structure 424

Attitudes Are Learned 425

Functions of Attitudes 425

Adjustment Function 425

Ego-Defensive Function 425

Value-Expression Function 426

Knowledge Function 426

Sources of Attitude Development 426

Personal Experience 427

Group Associations 427

Influential Others 427

Attitude Theories and Models 428

Congruity Theory 428

Balance Theory 430

Cognitive Dissonance 431

Multiattribute Models 432

The Peripheral Route to Developing Attitudes 440Summary 443*Managerial Reflections 444*Discussion Topics 444*Projects 445*Chapter 14*CHANGING ATTITUDES 447*Strategies for Changing Attitudes and Intentions 448

Low-Involvement Strategies 449

High-Involvement Strategies 451

The Communication Process 454Source Factors 455

Marketing Communication Sources 456

Influences on Source Effectiveness 456

Message Factors 462

Message Structure 462

Message Appeals 467

Message Codes 474

Receiver Factors 475

Personality Traits 475

Mood 476

Belief Types 476

Summary 477

Managerial Reflections 478

Discussion Topics 478

Projects 479

PART IV

CONSUMER DECISION PROCESSES 481

Chapter 15

PROBLEM RECOGNITION 483

Types of Consumer Decisions 484

Introduction to the Consumer Decision-Process Model 485

Problem Recognition 487

Research on Problem Recognition 488

Types of Problem Recognition 490

Situations Leading to Problem Recognition 491

Results of Problem Recognition 493

Problem Recognition Under Low-Involvement Conditions 494

Marketing Implications of Problem Recognition 494

Measuring Problem Recognition 494

Activating Problem Recognition 495

Utilizing Problem-Recognition Information 498

Summary 501

Managerial Reflections 501

Discussion Topics 501

Projects 502

Chapter 16

SEARCH AND EVALUATION 503

The Information-Search Process 504

Types of Consumer Search Activities 504

Types and Sources of Information 507

Amount of External Search Activity 507

The Information-Evaluation Process 513

Evaluative or Choice Criteria 513

Reducing the Range of Alternatives 517

Evaluating Alternatives 518

Factors Influencing the Amount of Evaluation 524

Results of Evaluation 524

Alternative Evaluation in Low-Involvement Situations 524

Marketing Implications 524

Studying the Information-Search Process 524

Influencing the Consumer's Evoked Set 526

Measuring Evaluative Criteria	526
Influencing Consumers' Evaluation	531

Summary	532
Managerial Reflections	532
Discussion Topics	532
Projects	533

Chapter 17

PURCHASING PROCESSES 535

Why Do People Shop?	537
Choosing a Store	538
Factors Determining Store Choice	540
The Importance of Store Attributes	545
The Effect of Store Image on Purchasing	545
General Shopper Profiles	546
Store-Specific Shopper Profiles	546
Store Loyalty	548
In-Store Purchasing Behavior	550
Merchandising Techniques	550
Personal Selling Effects	559
The Situational Nature of Consumer Decisions	559
Nonstore Purchasing Processes	560
The Significance of Nonstore Buying	561
Characteristics of Purchasers	562
In-Home Shopping Motivations	562
Marketing Implications	563
Purchasing Patterns	563
Brand Loyalty	564
Impulse Purchasing	567
Paying for the Purchase	569
Marketing Implications	569
Summary	570
Managerial Reflections	571
Discussion Topics	571
Projects	571

Chapter 18

POSTPURCHASE BEHAVIOR 573

Behavior Related to the Purchase	574
Decisions on Product Set-Up and Use	574
Decisions on Related Products or Services	575
Marketing Implications	575
Postpurchase Evaluation	578
Consumer Satisfaction/Dissatisfaction	579
Consumer Complaint Behavior	581
Postpurchase Dissonance	583
Product Disposition	590
Disposition Alternatives and Determinants	590
Marketing Implications	591

Summary	592
Managerial Reflections	593
Discussion Topics	593
Projects	593

Part V

ADDITIONAL DIMENSIONS 595

Chapter 19

MODELING AND RESEARCHING CONSUMER BEHAVIOR 597

Modeling Behavior	599
Definition of a Model	599
Types of Models	599
Uses of Models	599
Models of Consumer Behavior	600
Traditional Models of Consumers	600
Behavioral Economics	602
Contemporary Models	605
Consumer Research Strategies	613
Goals of Consumer Research	613
Type of Data Used	614
Research Time Frame	615
Methods of Gathering Consumer Information	615
Observation	615
Experiments	615
Surveys	617
Measuring Consumer Characteristics	618
Demographic Measures	618
Consumer Activity Measures	619
Cognitive Measures	619
Summary	622
Managerial Reflections	623
Discussion Topics	623
Projects	624

Chapter 20

CONSUMERISM 625

The Roots of Consumerism	627
History of Consumerism in the United States	628
The Early Years	628
The Formative Years	629
The Recent Era	629
Consumer Safety	629
Consumer Information	631
Deception of Consumers	631
Availability of Sufficient Information	633
Information Overload?	634

Consumer Choice	635
Consumer Redress	636
Environmental Concerns	637
Significance of Environmentalism	637
Environmental Consumer Types	640
Consumer Privacy	640
Legislative Responses to Consumerism	643
The Institutionalization of Consumerism	644
Business Responses to Social and Ethical Issues	645
Consumers' Responsibilities	674
Deviant Consumer Behavior	647
Marketer Responses to Consumer Issues	649
Understanding the Issues	649
Designing a Consumer Response System	651
Summary	653
Managerial Reflections	654
Discussion Topics	654
Projects	655

Chapter 21

ORGANIZATIONAL BUYER BEHAVIOR 657

Nature of Organizational Buying	658
Purpose of Organizational Buying	658
Organizational Buyers Versus Final Consumers	659
Influences on Organizational Buyer Behavior	666
Environmental Factors	666
Organizational Factors	667
Interpersonal Factors	668
Individual Factors	673
Organizational Buying Decisions	675
Types of Decision Situations	675
The Organizational Buyer's Decision Process	678
Summary	683
Managerial Reflections	684
Discussion Topics	684
Projects	684

CASES: CASE 1: The Motorcycle Industry Council 687 / CASE 2: Toaster Pastries Germany 691 / CASE 3: Metropolitan Life Insurance 693 / CASE 4: The Interfraternity Council 694 / CASE 5: American Express Co. 696 / CASE 6: Campbell Soup Co. 697 / CASE 7: National Tractor Pullers Association 698 / CASE 8: The Furniture and Home Furnishings Buyer 699 / CASE 9: The Fashion Customer 703 / CASE 10: Consumer Reactions to Processed Poultry Products 706 / CASE 11: Florida Grapefruit 708 / CASE 12: Giorgio Beverly Hills 712 / CASE 13: Eastern State University 713 / CASE 14: Buying a Personal Computer 716 / CASE 15: Health Care Search and Evaluation for Children 717 / CASE 16: The Must-Know Man 719 / CASE 17: The Retreat House 727 / CASE 18: Bio Landscaping 729 / CASE 19: Impulse Shoppers 729 / CASE 20: Ashton-Tate Corp. 730

NOTES 733

INDEX 783