

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Chapter One: From “Useful Measures” to “Measures Used”	1
by John M. Kamensky, Albert Morales, and Mark A. Abramson
Introduction
What Is “Managing for Results”?
Creating a Managing-for-Results Culture
Lessons Learned from Pioneers in Using Managing-for-Results Systems
Conclusions
Endnotes
Part I: Understanding the Potential of Using Performance Information	15
Chapter Two: Performance Management for Career Executives: A “Start Where You Are, Use What You Have” Guide	17
by Chris Wye
Author’s Note
Introduction
Making the Case for Performance Management
Designing Performance Indicators
Aligning Performance Processes
Using Performance Information
Communicating Performance Information
Publications of the Center for Improving Government Performance
Chapter Three: Linking Performance and Budgeting: Opportunities in the Federal Budget Process	83
by Philip G. Joyce
Introduction
The Federal Budget and Performance—Historical Antecedents
Bush Administration Efforts Designed to Better Integrate Budget and Performance Information
A Comprehensive Framework for Considering Budget and Performance Integration
Potential Uses of Performance-Informed Budgeting in the Federal Budget Process
Findings and Recommendations
Appendix I: The Wye River Conference
Appendix II: An Agenda for Research
Endnotes

Chapter Four: E-Reporting: Using Managing-for-Results Data to Strengthen Democratic Accountability	141
by Mordecai Lee
What Is Public Reporting?
Current Exemplary E-Reporting by Federal Agencies
Current Exemplary E-Reporting by State and Local Governments
Findings and Recommendations
Acknowledgments
Appendix I: Criteria Used to Review Contemporary E-Reporting
Appendix II: What Good E-Reporting Would Look Like
Appendix III: History of Public Reporting
Appendix IV: Methodology
Appendix V: Aggregate Results
Endnotes
Bibliography
Chapter Five: How Federal Programs Use Outcome Information: Opportunities for Federal Managers	197
by Harry P. Hatry, Elaine Morley, Shelli B. Rossman, and Joseph S. Wholey
Purpose, Scope, and Method
Summary of Findings
Recommendations to Federal Program Managers
Federal Program Case Studies
Acknowledgments
Endnotes
Part II: Lessons in the Use of Performance Information	275
Chapter Six: Strategies for Using State Information: Measuring and Improving Program Performance	277
by Shelley H. Metzenbaum
Introduction
Case Study One: Environmental Protection Agency—A Focus on Outcomes Via Partnership
Case Study Two: The Federal Highway Administration—A Value-Adding Information Operation
Case Study Three: National Highway Traffic Safety Administration—The Challenge of Performance Mandates
Case Study Four: Department of Education—Use of Comparisons to Leverage National Goals
Findings and Recommendations

Appendix I: Summary of Implementation Actions by Key Actor
 Endnotes
 Bibliography
 Sources

Chapter Seven: Setting Performance Targets: Lessons from the Workforce Investment Act System 351

by Carolyn J. Heinrich

Introduction
 Background Information on WIA and its Performance Management System
 Determination of Performance Targets under WIA
 States' Performance Under WIA
 Recommendations
 Conclusion
 Acknowledgments
 Endnotes
 Bibliography

Chapter Eight: Collaboration and Performance Management in Network Settings: Lessons from Three Watershed Governance Efforts 379

by Mark T. Imperial

Introduction
 Using Collaboration as a Governance Strategy
 Using Performance Management to Improve Network Governance
 Findings: Performance Management Systems in Network Settings
 Five Recommendations for Public Managers Operating in Network Settings
 Endnotes

Chapter Nine: Using a Performance Budgeting System: Lessons from the Texas Experience 425

by Joe Adams

Introduction
 Layers of Performance Measures: Accountability to Whom?
 The Target Setting Process
 Defining Success: Does the System Work?
 Explanation of Variance: Processes and Performance Drivers
 Beyond Performance Measures: Understanding Processes
 Lessons Learned
 Endnotes
 Bibliography

Chapter Ten: The Baltimore CitiStat Program: Performance and Accountability	465
by Lenneal J. Henderson
Introduction
CitiStat Context
The CitiStat Concept
The CitiStat Experience of Two Baltimore City Agencies
Findings and Recommendations
Acknowledgments
Endnotes
Bibliography
About the Contributors	499
About the IBM Center for The Business of Government	509