CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ................................................................. ix
Note on the Transliteration of Arabic Terms .............................. xi

Introduction ........................................................................... 1

Chapter One  Behind the Scenes: Historical, Political, and Economic Aspects of Jordan .................................................. 37
Experiences of Historical, Political, and Economic Aspects ............... 38
Jordan, Palestine, and the Palestinians ........................................ 41
Domestic Developments of the 1990s ........................................ 45
Foreign Aid and Remittances ................................................ 47
The Gulf War and its Aftermath .............................................. 50
Dramatic Transformations .................................................. 54

Chapter Two  Of Women, Men, and Other Agents:
Gender Roles and their Discontent .......................................... 57
Femininities and Masculinities in Jordan .................................. 58
Changing Attitudes Concerning Women in Jordan ....................... 70
Honour, Reputation, Gossip, and Harassment ............................ 77
Confronting Stress ............................................................. 86

Chapter Three  Ties that Bind: Family Relationships ................. 93
Conceptualising “Family” in the Middle East ............................. 94
Families as Networks .......................................................... 96
Families as Resources .......................................................... 100
Families and Relationality .................................................... 111
Relationships Between Mothers and Daughters ......................... 118
Relationships Between Fathers and Daughters ......................... 129
Families and the Socialisation of Young People ......................... 136

Chapter Four  Coming of Age in Jordan: Problems of Young People .................................................................... 143
Conceptualising “Adolescence” and “Young Adulthood” ............. 144
A Time of Growing Older: Becoming a Woman ....................... 149
A Time of Confusions, Conflicts, and Inconsistencies .......... 161
Shifting Loyalties: The Influence of Friends ..................... 171
Education and Educators ........................................ 176
Tying Up Loose Ends: Concluding Remarks ..................... 180

Chapter Five  Reaching Out: Young Women as Social Agents ................................................................... 183
Jordanian Women’s Presence in Political and Economic Spheres .............................................................. 185
Activities in the Wider Community ................................... 192
Women’s Movements ....................................................... 192
A Community Project ...................................................... 193
Students’ Groups ............................................................. 196
Spaces for Agency: Concluding Remarks ......................... 203

Chapter Six  “Woman to Woman”: Aspects of Young
Women’s Religiousness ..................................................... 207
Religious Communities in Jordan ...................................... 208
Women in Islamic and Christian Religious Dogma ............... 214
The Meaning and Significance of Religion and Religiousness for Young Women ...................................... 219
Acquiring Religious Knowledge ....................................... 220
Women’s Participation in the Life of Religious Communities ................................................................. 229
Religious Rituals ............................................................. 234
Prayer ........................................................................... 235
Fasting .......................................................................... 239
Aspects of Individual Religiousness ................................... 247
Positive and Negative Aspects of Being a Believer .......... 248
Feminine and Masculine Religiousness? ......................... 252

Chapter Seven  Dressed to Impress? Clothes,
Religiousness, and a Language of Symbols ....................... 256
Dress as “Language”: Expression of Worldviews .............. 258
Expressing Opposition and Protest .................................. 264
Tongue-Tied: Limitations in the Language of Dress .......... 269
Inventing Sartorial Traditions ......................................... 276
Same But Different .......................................................... 281
Intentions, “Lies”, and (Mis) Interpretations ................... 284
CONTENTS

In Other “Words”: Symbols of Religiousness ....................... 289
Concluding Remarks ..................................................... 293

Conclusion ........................................................................ 295

Bibliography .................................................................... 309

Index .............................................................................. 323