

Contents

Preface: Six Readers Reading—and Feeling	ix
Acknowledgments	xix
1. Introduction: Effeminacy, Feelings, Forms	1
Effeminacy: A Third Term for Gender Studies	9
Feelings: How Do You Really Feel?	11
Forms: Feminist Narratology and Close Reading	23
2. The Cry: Effeminate Sentimentalism	29
Having a Good Cry	30
Sentimentalism and Sexism	34
A Narratology of Good-Cry Techniques	41
Crying Over The Color Purple	50
3. The Cringe: Marriage Plots, Effeminacy, and Feminist Ambivalence	58
Reading Too Closely for Comfort	60
Discomforts of Reading Pretty Woman	64
4. The Thrill and the Yawn: Antieffeminate Structures of Feeling in Serial Forms	71
Self-Conscious Serial Forms	73
Reading the (Boring) Victorian Serial	76
Antieffeminate Affect	88
E-mail as an Antieffeminate Form	96
Bending Gender and the Habits of Affect	99
5. The Climax and the Undertow: Effeminate Intensities in Soap Opera	102
Who Is the “I” Who Watches Soaps?	105
Intensities and Long-Term Viewing	108
Effeminate Feeling and Soap Form	116
Afterword: The Reader's Body from the Inside Out	120
Notes	125
Bibliography	135
Index	143