

Contents

	Acknowledgments	ix
1	From the Revolutionary War to the “Revolutionary Generation”: Some Introductory Thoughts on Rap Music, Black Nationalism, and the Golden Age of Rap Nationalism	1
2	“We Men Ain’t We?” Mas(k)ulinity and the Gendered Politics of Black Nationalism	27
3	Brothers Gonna Work It Out: The Popular/Political Culture of Rap Music	63
4	Ladies First? Defining Manhood in the Golden Age of Rap Nationalism	97
5	Representin’ God: Masculinity and the Use of the Bible in Rap Nationalism	119
6	Be True to the Game: Final Reflections on the Politics and Practices of the Hip-Hop Nation	149
	Notes	173
	Selected Bibliography	207
	Index	215
	About the Author	222