

Contents

Figures	ix
Tables	x
Contributors	xi
Preface and Acknowledgments	xiv
1 Positivism, Popper and Paradigms: an introductory essay in the philosophy of science	1
MIKE McNAMEE
2 Must scientists think philosophically about science?	21
JIM PARRY
3 Can physiology be both Popperian and ethical?	34
NEIL SPURWAY
4 How does a foundational myth become sacred scientific dogma? The case of A.V. Hill and the anaerobiosis controversy	56
TIM NOAKES
5 Why doesn't sports psychology consider Freud?	85
GRAHAM McFEE
6 Do statistical methods replace reasoning in exercise science research?	117
STEPHEN-MARK COOPER AND ALAN NEVILL
7 What are the limitations of experimental and theoretical approaches in sports biomechanics?	133
M.R. YEADON
8 Can we trust rehydration research?	144
TIM NOAKES

9	Is sport and exercise science a man's game?	169
	CELIA BRACKENRIDGE, NANETTE MUTRIE AND PRECILLA CHOI
10	Autoethnography: self-indulgence or rigorous methodology?	187
	JACQUELYN ALLEN COLLINSON AND JOHN HOCKEY
11	Is investigative sociology just investigative journalism?	203
	JOHN SUGDEN
12	Is research with and on students ethically defensible?	219
	ROGER HOMAN
13	Obesity, type 2 diabetes mellitus and the metabolic syndrome: What are the choices for prevention in the twenty-first century?	236
	SIMON WILLIAMS AND RHYS WILLIAMS
	Index	247