

CONTENTS

List of Tables and Figures vii

Acknowledgments ix

Part I. The Institutional Development of the News Media

1. Civic Journalism and the Transformation of an Authoritarian Media Institution 3
2. Media Transformation through Institutional Lenses 24

Part II. The Civic Media Transformation

3. Authoritarian and Democratic Models of News Production 47
4. Ending the Monologue: The Rise of Civic Journalism 69
5. The Limits to Civic Journalism 88
6. How Institutional Entrepreneurs Created Civic Newsrooms 108

Part III. Alternative Transformation Paths

7. Alternatives to the Civic Newsroom:
Inertial and Adaptive Authoritarianism 131
8. Market-Driven Journalism 155

Part IV. Prospects for Civic Journalism and Democracy

9. The Durability of Civic Journalism 191
10. Media Transformation in Comparative Perspective 208

Appendix: Coding Instrument 241

Notes 245

References 261

Index 279

TABLES AND FIGURES

Tables

- 1.1 Central Elements of Alternative Press Models 14
- 3.1 Diversity in the News 59
- 3.2 Autonomy 62
- 3.3 Assertiveness 64
- 3.4 Civic Journalism Score, 2000 68
- 5.1 Press Treatment of Powerful Figures 92
- 5.2 Press Agenda Setting 93
- 5.3 Broadcast Advertising Giants 96
- 5.4 Distribution of Household Monetary Income 97
- 5.5 Perception of Freedom to Report Critically 101
- 6.1 Change Processes in Civic Newspapers 110–11
- 6.2 Change in Newspaper Readership Rankings for Greater Mexico City 118
- 6.3 Journalists' Role Models 121
- 6.4 Transformative Experiences 122
- 7.1 Divergent Pathways 147
- 7.2 Local Television Stations, 2000 Election 148
- 8.1 Tabloidization of the News Agenda: Newscast Time by Subject 164
- 9.1 Tone of Presidential Coverage, 2003 192
- 9.2 Reporting Assertiveness for Presidential News, 2003 193
- 9.3 Framing Assertiveness for Presidential News, 2003 193
- 9.4 Material Requested under the Federal Law for Transparency and Access to Information 200

- 9.5 Private Sector and Government Advertising in Civic Newspapers 205
- 9.6 Conceptions of the Role of Journalism among Editors in Leading Mexican Newspapers, 2003 207
- 10.1 The Institutional Model of Media Transformation 209
- 10.2 Civic Newspaper Networks, Influence, and Decline in Four Countries 239

Figures

- 1.1 Study Participants 15
- 1.2 A Model of Civic Newsroom Transformation 17
- 2.1 Institutional Model of News Media Transformation 39
- 3.1 Comparative Media Models 48
- 3.2 Civic Journalism Index, 2000 68
- 4.1 Volume of Presidential Coverage 77
- 4.2 Positive Coverage of the President 77
- 4.3 Passive Reporting about the President 78
- 4.4 Articles Mentioning Both the Military and Human Rights 79
- 4.5 Average Mexicans Presented as Empowered 86
- 6.1 Growth in Private Sector Advertising Investment 116
- 6.2 Advertising Breakdown for Seven Mexico City Newspapers, 1999 119
- 7.1 PRI Presidential Vote Compared to Political Coverage of PRI 133
- 8.1 Increasing Pluralism in Electoral News 162
- 8.2 Reforma Election Polls, 1997 Campaign 176
- 8.3 Positive Election Coverage on Televisa, 2000 183
- 8.4 Shifts in Mexico City Newscast Audience Preferences 185