Introduction 1

1. e-Learning: Promise and Pitfalls 11

The e-Learning Bandwagon 12

What Is e-Learning? 13

e-Learning Development Process 14

Two Types of e-Learning Goals: Inform and Perform 17

Is e-Learning Better? Media Comparison Research 20

What Makes e-Learning Unique 21

e-Learning: The Pitfalls 24

What Is Good e-Courseware? 26

Three Types of e-Learning 28
e-Learning to Support Human Learning Processes 30

2. How People Learn from E-Courses 33

How Do People Learn? 35
How e-Lessons Affect Human Learning 36
What Is Good Research? 42

3. Applying the Multimedia Principle: Use Words and Graphics Rather Than Words Alone 51

Multimedia Principle: Include Both Words and Graphics 54
Psychological Reasons for the Multimedia Principle 60
Evidence for Using Words and Pictures 61

4. Applying the Contiguity Principle: Place Corresponding Words and Graphics Near Each Other 67

Contiguity Principle: Place Printed Words Near Corresponding Graphics 70
Psychological Reasons for the Contiguity Principle 76
Evidence for Presenting Words at the Same Time as Corresponding Graphics 77

5. Applying the Modality Principle: Present Words as Audio Narration Rather Than Onscreen Text 83

Modality Principle: Present Words as Speech Rather Than Onscreen Text 86
Psychological Reasons for the Modality Principle 88
Evidence for Using Spoken Rather Than Printed Text 91

6. Applying the Redundancy Principle: Presenting Words in Both Text and Audio Narration Can Hurt Learning 97

Redundancy Principle One: Avoid Presenting Words as Narration and Identical Text in the Presence of Graphics 99
Psychological Reasons for the Redundancy Principle 101

Evidence for Omitting Redundant Onscreen Text	103
Redundancy Principle Two: Consider the Narration of Onscreen Text in Special Situations	105
Psychological Reasons for Exceptions to Redundancy Principle	106
Evidence for Including Redundant Onscreen Words	107

7. Applying the Coherence Principle: Adding Interesting Material Can Hurt Learning 111

Coherence Principle One: Avoid e-Lessons with Extraneous Sounds	115
Psychological Reasons to Avoid Extraneous Sounds	117
Evidence for Omitting Extraneous Sounds	118
Coherence Principle Two: Avoid e-Lessons with Extraneous Pictures	120
Psychological Reasons to Avoid Interesting but Extraneous Graphics	120
Evidence for Omitting Extraneous Graphics	122
Coherence Principle Three: Avoid e-Lessons with Extraneous Words	124
Psychological Reasons to Minimize Words in e-Learning	126
Evidence for Omitting Extraneous Words	126

8. Applying the Personalization Principle: Use Conversational Style and Virtual Coaches 131

Personalization Principle One: Use Conversational Rather Than Formal Style	133
Psychological Reasons for the Personalization Principle	135
Evidence for Using Conversational Style	136
Personalization Principle Two: Use Onscreen Coaches to Promote Learning	138

9. Does Practice Make Perfect? 149

Design of Practice in e-Learning	151
Practice Principle One: Interactions Should Mirror the Job	153
Psychological Reasons for Job-Relevant Practice	155

Evidence for the Benefits of Practice	158
Practice Principle Two: Critical Tasks Require More Practice	159
Psychological Reasons for Multiple Distributed Practice Exercises	159
The Evidence for Multiple Distributed Practice Exercises	160
Practice Principle Three: Apply the Media Elements Principles to Practice Exercises	164
Practice Principle Four: Train Learners to Self-Question During Receptive e-Lessons	166
Psychological Reasons for Training Self-Questioning Skills	166
Evidence for Training Self-Questioning	168
10. Leveraging Examples in e-Learning	173
Worked Examples: Fuel for Learning	175
Worked Example Principle One: Replace Some Practice Problems with Worked Examples	177
Psychological Reasons for Using Worked Examples	178
Evidence for Benefits of Worked Examples	179
Worked Example Principle Two: Apply the Media Elements Principles to Examples	180
Psychological Reasons for Applying the Media Element Principles	184
Evidence for the Media Elements Principles	184
Worked Example Principle Three: Use Job-Realistic or Varied Worked Examples	186
Psychological Reasons to Adapt Examples to Task Types	187
The Evidence for Worked Examples That Support Transfer	188
Worked Example Principle Four: Teach Learners to Self-Explain Examples	190
Psychological Reasons for Training Self-Explanations	191
The Evidence for Self-Explanations	192
11. Learning Together on the Web	197
What Is Collaborative Learning?	199

- What We Know About Collaboration During Learning 205
- Models for Productive Group Collaborations 209
- Psychological Reasons for Collaborative Assignments 220
- The Evidence for Online Collaborative Learning 221
- 12. Do Surfing and Learning Mix? The Effectiveness of Learner Control in e-Learning 225
 - Learner Control Versus Program Control 227
 - Do Learners Make Good Instructional Decisions? 231
 - Psychological Reasons for Poor Learner Choices 233
 - Learner Control Principle One: Use Learner Control for Learners with High Prior Knowledge or High Metacognitive Skills 234
 - Learner Control Principle Two: Make Important Instructional Events the Default Navigation Option 236
 - Learner Control Principle Three: Add Advisement to Learner Control 238
 - Navigational Guidelines for Learner Control 239
- 13. e-Learning to Build Problem-Solving Skills 247
 - What Are Problem-Solving Skills? 249
 - Problem-Solving Principle One: Use Job Contexts to Teach Problem Solving Processes 251
 - Psychological Reasons for Job-Specific Training 253
 - Evidence for Job-Specific Problem-Solving Training 255
 - Problem-Solving Principle Two: Focus Training on Thinking Processes Versus Job Knowledge 256
 - Psychological Reasons to Provide Metacognitive Worked Examples 260
 - Problem-Solving Principle Three: Make Learners Aware of Their Problem-Solving Processes 260
 - Psychological Reasons for Assigning Practice in Problem-Solving 264
 - Problem-Solving Principle Four: Incorporate Job-Specific Problem-Solving Processes 264

14. Applying the Guidelines 271

Applying Our Guidelines to Evaluate e-Courseware 271

e-Lesson Reviews 273

Sample One: Ammunition Safety 277

Sample Two: Creating Links in Dreamweaver 281

Sample Three: Accelerate Expertise—Researching Commercial Bank
Loans 285

Sample Four: Identifying Hazardous Materials 288
