Contents

Preface xi

1 Introduction: contemporary religion 1

Marx and religion 2
Characterizing religion 6
Religion and the Kantian sublime 7
Our approach 9

2 The retreat of ultimate and sublime values 12

The retreat of ultimate and sublime values from public life 13
The sublime bourgeois interior 14
The constitutional state and the spirit of Yahweh 18

3 Disembodiment and the sublime: the birth of modern religion 21

The disappearing body and blood of the Holy Eucharist 24
Time, value and the emergence of the sublime 26
The sublime value form of the commodity 31
Edmund Burke, Immanuel Kant, G.F.W. Hegel and the sublime 33

4 The ‘spirit’ of capitalism 38

The problem 38
Capitalism and religion 40
The mechanistic triebwerk of capitalism and its sublime spirit 46
Immanuel Kant, Heinrich Rickert and Max Weber 47
War and hope 54
Contents

5 The biatus irrationalis

The gulf between value and body 59
Weber, Lukács and Schmitt 63
Lukács: imputed class consciousness 64
Schmitt: the extreme condition 66
Mortifying the flesh 71

6 The prophetic pneuma

Confucian China and Weberian Traditionalism 75
Developmental logic and religion in China 79
From natural to traditional religion 81
Warfare and War Prophecy 84
Ancient religious warriors and the sublime 86
The fate of warrior religion 88

7 The 'community unto death'

Die Gemeinschaft bis zum Tode 96
Death and the value form of the commodity 100
Passchendaele: the sacrificial ground 101

8 The body of religion

Radical orthodoxy 106
Embodied religion – spiritual bodies 108
Post-capitalism religion 108

Notes 112
Bibliography 126
Index 136