

TABLE OF CONTENT

1	Introduction	8
1.1	Formalities	11
2	Background of Aboriginal Writing	13
2.1	Postcolonial Writing and the Australian Context	13
2.1.1	Introduction	13
2.1.2	Characteristics	15
2.1.2.1	Place and Displacement	15
2.1.2.2	The Power of Language	16
2.1.2.3	The Dominating Coloniser and the Dominated Colonised	20
2.1.2.4	Strategies of Resistance: Decolonisation and Identity Formation	21
2.1.3	Three Stages of Postcolonial Writing	23
2.2	Historical and Social Background	25
2.2.1	The Stolen Generation and Government Assimilation Policies	25
2.2.2	The Role Of Traditional Aboriginal Kinship Society	29
2.2.3	Aboriginality	30
2.3	Indigenous vs. Western Cultures	33
2.3.1	Indigenous Autobiographical Writing vs. Western Autobiographies	33
2.3.2	Oral traditions vs. Written Material	35
2.4	Indigenous Women's Autobiographical Writing	38
2.4.1	'Autobiography' or 'Life Story': The Choice of Terms	38
2.4.2	The Traditional Role of Aboriginal Women	41
2.4.3	The Development of Indigenous Australian Women's Writing	42
3	Reclaiming Identities: Four Aboriginal Authors and their Works	45
3.1	Ruby Langford Ginibi: Don't Take Your Love to Town (1988)	45
3.1.1	Ruby Langford Ginibi	45
3.1.2	The Process of Writing	47
3.1.3	Displacement	51
3.1.3.1	Early Years and Ruby Langford Ginibi's Separation from her Mother	52
3.1.3.2	Relationships and Loneliness	54

3.1.4	Belonging	58
3.1.4.1	Geographical Belonging: City vs. Bush	58
3.1.4.2	Physical Belonging: Black vs. White, Child vs. Mother	61
3.1.4.3	Social and Cultural Belonging: Family, Kin and Community	62
3.1.5	Editing	66
3.1.6	Language	69
3.1.7	Summary	71
3.2	Rita and Jackie Huggins: Auntie Rita (1994)	73
3.2.1	Rita and Jackie Huggins	73
3.2.2	Writing and Editing: A Joint Project	73
3.2.3	Displacement	76
3.2.3.1	Geographical Displacement	76
3.2.3.2	Cultural Displacement	79
3.2.4	Belonging	81
3.2.4.1	Loneliness: Domestic Service and the Unspoken Story	82
3.2.4.2	Loneliness: City and Individuality	84
3.2.4.3	Returning: Political Engagement	86
3.2.4.4	Returning: The Land and the Past	88
3.2.4.5	Getting Around and Still Belonging	90
3.2.4.6	Reunion and Looking Back	95
3.2.5	Language	96
3.2.6	Summary	98
3.3	Alice Nannup: When the Pelican Laughed (1992)	100
3.3.1	Alice Nannup	100
3.3.2	Writing	100
3.3.3	Displacement	102
3.3.4	Belonging: Returning and Reconnecting	104
3.3.5	Editing	107
3.3.6	Language	108
3.3.7	Summary	111
4	Conclusion	113
5	Bibliography	121